Battle Likely On Proposed Liquor Sales Here Sundays

Board To Hold Hearing Monday on Amending Present Laws.

Early Morning Ban Would Be Voided

'Hard' Type of Beverage Would Be Allowed After 1 P. M.

A bill to authorize the sale of "hard liquor" on Sundays, together with ten other local measures, will be discussed at a public hearing before the District Commissioners Monday, and a lively battle is in prospect.

The bill was introduced in the last Congress, but never acted on. The Commissioners have called Monday's hearing before deciding whether to approve this and the other measures.

Under the present alcoholic beverage control law, no whisky or other "hard liquor" may be sold on Sundays. The new bill would permit the sale of liquor from midnight to 2 a. m. and from 1 p. m. to midnight Sunday.

The hearing will begin at 10:15 a. m. in Room 219 of the District Building. Other measures on the agenda are:

An amendment to the District law code strengthening gambling laws and providing for control of the "numbers" racket.

A bill to establish a farm for the care and treatment of persons addicted to the use of intoxicants.

A bill to create a juvenile court for the District.

A bill relative to qualifications of law practitioners in the District.

A bill to establish a mental health committee to handle lunacy proceedings.

An act to provide for semiannual inspection of motor vehicles.

An act to regulate the manufacture, dispensing, selling and possession of narcotic drugs.

A bill to provide for the extension of Prospect street in Georgetown.

A bill to protect the public against fraud in real estate transactions by regulating and licensing real estate brokers and realty salesmen and establishing a real estate commission.

A bill to provide for study and report on the need for a subway system.

The Commissioners will preside at Monday's hearings, assisted by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal. Washington residents, Commissioner Hazen said, are invited to comment on the proposals.

Trotzky and Wife Sail From Norway For Mexican Haven

By the United Press.

Oslo (Wednesday), Dec. 23.—Leon Trotzky, exiled Russian Bolshevik leader, and his wife were en route to a secret Mexican port today aboard the Norwegian steamer Ruth.

Norwegian authorities, who revealed last night that the Trotzkys had sailed Saturday, said that even the captain of the Ruth did not know his destination.

When the vessel nears Mexico a radio dispatch from Mexican authorities will inform the captain what port he is to proceed to.

A heavy police guard was maintained around the Norwegian port of Hurum, from which the Ruth sailed, until today in an effort to conceal Trotzky's departure.

The exiled Bolshevik leader's permit to remain in Norway expired December 20. Mexico offered him asylum several weeks ago. It was revealed Trotzky agreed two weeks ago to leave Norway, but attached three conditions to his departure:

1. That he be armed.
2. That he be allowed free use of the radio while aboard ship.
3. That he be allowed to communicate freely with an unidentified German emigre in Oslor prior to his departure.

The Norwegian government refused the last two conditions, but allowed him to go aboard the Ruth carrying arms.

The Ruth is a 5,486-ton ship operated by the Rederi Co. under the Norwegian flag with Oslo as its home port.

Wife of Chiang Flies to Fort Of Foe to Plead for Husband

Soong, Finance Minister and Brother, Also Is in Plane Party.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking, Dec. 22.—Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, a wife fearful for the safety of her mate and no longer mindful of state policies, flew from Nanking today to Sianfu, center of rebellion, to treat directly with the insurgent Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang for the freedom of her husband.

She refused to heed arguments of numerous high officials outside her own family circle that her presence in the city where Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has been captive since December 12 would only weaken the government's hand in its efforts to suppress rebellion and release its leader.

Besides her brother, T. V. Soong, former minister of finance, Mme. Chiang took with her a cook, a maid and quantities of baggage. Although she refused to discuss her plans or estimate the duration of her stay in Sianfu, the scale of her preparations was taken to indicate she expected to remain at her husband's side indefinitely.

What demands Mme. Chiang might be confronted with when she faced the rebel marshal remained a mystery in Nanking. However, earlier reports Marshal Chiang was demanding a huge monetary ransom were discounted by officials, who pointed out that the insurgent leader already possesses a large private fortune and probably would prefer political concessions to cash.

MME. CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

From Peiping came reports of an offer by Marshal Chang "to submit to any punishment Nanking decrees if the generalissimo will only adopt a policy of resistance to our foe (Japan)." This offer was said to have been contained in a telegram from the rebel marshal to a group of university chancellors

Reich Extols Merit of Fish In Food Crisis

Nazis Also Warn Against Bread Waste in Move to Build Reserves.

Ocean Is Inexhaustible Source; Krupps Make Bridge-Onion Deal.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 22.—Nazi Germany decided on a fish sale with directions for cooking today and appealed to housewives to save bread crusts to cope with the food shortage and lessen the need for foreign imports.

Franz Hayler, leader of the Retail Food Dealers Federation, announced the campaign to boom fish as a native raw material which doesn't cost foreign exchange, and the government is helping by expanding the high seas fishing fleet.

"Discarded food still is found in garbage pails, especially pieces of bread," the appeal for conservation issued through the German News Agency said. "That must not be."

Waste Decried.

"Bread must be treated as a gift from earth. He who throws away bread injures the nation. He who is careful with bread helps secure his own and the nation's food. * * * Leave no bread to get dry; even the smallest piece can be used. Throw nothing away. Be careful of your daily bread."

To further the consumption of fish, training schools will be opened for salesmen who "must be able to explain to customers what dishes requiring little skill are already well known and popular in other countries," Hayler said.

Another boon to the German campaign to find new foods was an agreement by the Krupp Works, armament manufacturers, to supply great quantities of onions.

Bridge Buys Onions.

Krupp will build a bridge across the Nile for the Egyptian government, accept onions in part payment and bring them back to Germany.

Housewives were surprised to learn that the Reich price commissioner had permitted a slight rise in the price per head of cabbage, urged upon the populace for weeks as a cheap home food. The price increase was designed to compensate dealers for winter losses due to shrinkage and decay of outer leaves.

The Frankfurter Zeitung, which predicted recently a million-ton wheat shortage in Germany, reported today there was a scarcity of oats because "the army commissaries are taking all available supplies."

Hopkins Asks 750 Millions Relief Fund

Demand for Program to July 1 Tops Roosevelt Figure by Half.

Party Split Threatened; Resignation of WPA's Chief Is Hinted.

By the Associated Press.

Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress Administrator, was reported authoritatively yesterday to be seeking an appropriation of $750,000,000 to carry the work relief program for the balance of the fiscal year ending June 30.

Hopkins' demand, topping by 50 per cent the sum twice suggested by President Roosevelt, was said to have stirred up a bitter conflict between so-called "conservative" and "liberal" factions within the Administration.

In the revised budget last September, the Chief Executive set $500,000,000 as the maximum that would be needed. He repeated that figure last week.

But with last year's $1,425,000,000 fund approaching exhaustion, Hopkins was said by those who have talked to him recently to be insisting upon at least $750,000,000 for unemployment relief, exclusive of what may be needed to aid drought victims.

Resignation Hinted.

There were seemingly authentic reports that the Works Progress Administrator had said he would resign unless his demands were met, contending that $500,000,000 would be insufficient to care for existing needs through the last five months of the year.

President Roosevelt has given no indication he will raise his quota. There were forecasts on Capitol Hill that the Chief Executive would recommend $500,000,000 and let Congress decide whether it should be raised.

In view of recent moves by city mayors and relief workers to prevent cuts in WPA rolls, Hopkins undoubtedly would draw strong support in Congress for his program.

On the other hand strong forces were understood to be working within the Administration to cut down relief expenditures and head toward a balanced budget. This move also had substantial support on Capitol Hill.

Exhaustion by Feb. 1.

Latest estimates have indicated present relief funds will be gone by the end of January or early in February. It was argued by some that the supplemental appropriation of $500,000,000 would require substantial reductions either in the number of relief beneficiaries or the amount received by them individually.

Jumping the supplemental appropriation from $500,000,000 to $750,000,000 would raise the prospective deficit for this fiscal year from $2,596,000,000 to $2,846,000,000.

But even more important from the standpoint of those who had hoped at least to approach a balanced budget in the next fiscal year, it would slow down the tapering off process by which they had hoped to begin cutting down relief expenditures this year in preparation for bigger cuts next year.

British Press Assails Clergy's Slur on Edward, Asks Silence

3 High Church Prelates Appeal for a Religious Revival in England.

By the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Dec. 23.—The British press struck out angrily today at the Archbishop of York for a belated attack on former King Edward in which he berated the exiled monarch for taking another mans' wife.

London's morning newspapers lined up in an almost solid front against the archbishop, who inferred, in a letter to his northern England diocese, that Edward was a man without honor because he refused to give up a married woman with whom he had fallen in love.

The Daily Express, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, said:

"At this time we would like to drop Edward's affairs. We believe the public wishes that, too. However, another archbishop has brought it up again.

"There are two archbishops whom the English state recognizes and pays for. Now they have both had their say about the former head of the state. So now, possibly, both of them will agree to let things rest.

"The Archbishop of Canterbury's call to prayer for faith, hope and charity could not have been better timed.

"The greatest of these is charity and it begins at home."

The Daily Mail, powerful Rothermere newspaper, said:

"The harsh terms used by the

The Daily Sketch said editorially:

U. S. Bureaus' Unification Not Expected To Cut Costs

Administration Doubts That Consolidation Will Save Money.

Resettlement Unit Slated for Merger

Reorganization Plans of Several States Now Being Studied.

By Felix Bruner.

The Administration expects no substantial reduction in costs to result from proposed Government reorganization, it was learned last night.

The objective of proposed regrouping of agencies is efficiency, rather than economy, it was revealed. There is expected to be little pruning of Government activities.

President Roosevelt has received preliminary suggestions for a reorganization from his special committee. He is expected to confer soon with Senator Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the Senate committee, and Representative Buchanan (Democrat), Texas, chairman of a similar House committee.

Reorganization plans, now under discussion, would result in the grouping of nearly all administrative functions in the present Cabinet departments, and possibly a few other organizations. This would not disturb the work now being done by the score of agencies, nor would it seriously disturb the present personnel setup. It would mean that responsibility would be centered in a few officials, instead of many.

New York Plan Studied.

In connection with proposed reorganization, the experience of State governments, notably those of Illinois, New York, Virginia and Massachusetts, is being studied.

The experience of New York, where the government was reorganized under Gov. Smith, was given as an example of what may happen in Washington. In that State there were 120 agencies reporting to the Governor. This number was reduced to 18, each a department having general related functions. As a result of the reorganization few government functions were eliminated, and costs were cut very little. States which have reorganized have cut their costs only 1 to 3 per cent, it was explained.

It was pointed out that, while such a consolidation might eliminate the jobs of some heads of agencies, the saving would be very small, because the greatest cost to the Government is the salaries of employes, clerks, stenographers and experts. Nevertheless, it was explained, there would be some saving.

While agencies would be grouped in a few departments, the proposal that the President be given authority to transfer functions from one department to another is being considered. It was pointed out that over a period of years the functions of some agencies change completely, necessitating their transfer from one department to another.

Change Stressed.

The procurement division of the Treasury was cited as an example. Several years ago it was a mere purchasing agency, but now it has grown to what was described as a public works office. It is expected that this function will be taken from the Treasury.

Another problem which is being discussed concerns such commissions as the Federal Trade Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission and many others which were started as quasi-judicial bodies, but which have assumed large administrative functions. These groups are not responsible directly to the President.

A way is being sought to center the executive functions of these organizations in the executive department. A committee of the American Bar Association recently suggested the removal of judicial functions from various agencies and centering them in an administrative court.

RA Shift Scheduled.

One of the proposals which is being given consideration is consolidation of the Works Progress Administration and the Public Works Administration. It was pointed out that their jobs are essentially similar. This gave rise again to the possibility that the plan will include formation of a new department headed by an additional Cabinet member. Such a department might combine all the various Government welfare activities including the relief agencies, the administration of social security, public health, child welfare and similar duties which are now scattered.

The first step in consolidation will be transfer of the Resettlement Ad-

Gomez Seeking Right to Plead Cause at Trial

President Would Defend Self at Impeachment Session Opening Today.

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Dec. 22. — President Migel Mariano Gomez tonight demanded the right to make a personal defense before the Senate tomorrow when it convenes as a court of justice to try him for "interfering with the free function of a legislative power."

Although the court's law stipulates that the accused cannot appear at his own trial, Gomez was said to have based his appeal for the right to conduct his own defense as an attorney in good standing.

Rules for conducting the impeachment proceeding permit him to name his own attorneys and he was said to have contended that as an attorney he could name himself.

The trial was to open at 3:30 p. m., exactly 24 hours after the charges had been delivered to him by Calef Justice Juan F. Edelman.

There was no indication tonight whether his request for a right to personal defense would be granted.

The Senate met during the afternoon to receive the impeachment charges, voted 111 to 45 by the House, constituted itself a court of justice and adjourned until the trial session tomorrow to permit Gomez time to prepare a written defense.

There was little chance, however, that Gomez could escape ouster in his fight with "Strong Man" Col. Fulgencio Batista and the army over a sugar-tax measure to provide funds for army-built, army-instructed schools, most officials and observers believed.

Gomez opposed the army school system because he feared it would result in a turn to fascism in the island republic.

Roosevelt Will Get Miniature of Huge California Bridge

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 22 (AP).—Because President Roosevelt was unable to come here to attend opening ceremonies of the $77,000,000 Transbay Bridge, members of the Oakland Junior Chamber of Commerce decided to send the bridge to him.

A miniature of the giant span wrought in silver and gold will go forward to the Chief Executive this week, with a Christmas card from the organization.

Halves of the golden link severed by Gov. Frank Merriam will be made into a souvenir paper weight for the President.

U. S. Socialists Prepare to Join Army of Spain

'Eugene Debs Column' to Help Madrid Forces, Aide at N. Y. States.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 22.—Formation of a contingent of American Socialists to fight with Spanish regulars against insurgent forces was announced tonight by Jack Altman, secretary of the Socialist Party of New York.

It will be called the "Eugene V. Debs Column," Altman said, in memory of the Socialist leader, and will join the International Brigade, now fighting in defense of Madrid. Dispatch of the men would begin, he said, as soon as definite information was received regarding the needs of the Spanish loyalists.

Soldiers Trade Insults.

By the United Press.

Madrid (Wednesday), Dec. 23.—Rebel and loyalist soldiers traded insults during a lull in the battle north of Madrid early today, scrambled from their trenches demanding man-to-man fights, and were mowed down by machine-gun fire.

A Fascist infantryman raised his head above a shallow trench in the Moncloa sector and called out:

"Mal hijo!" (bad son).

The loyalist soldiers replied with more vigorous epithets and the rebels stormed out into no-man's-land, inviting the militiamen to fight it out with their fists.

The government machine gunners waited until the swearing rebels were upon their barricades, then opened fire. Fifty rebels were killed. The others ran back to their trench.

There was a brief lull and the exchange of insults started again. This time the loyalist left their trenches and were met by a hail of bullets.

More than 100 men of both sides were killed in the "insult trade," it was reported.

Half of the city of Madrid was without telephone service today as result of an intensive shelling of the 13-story Telifonica Building, owned by the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., an American corporation.

Three Direct Hits.

Madrid, Dec. 22 (AP).—Fascist insurgent artillery hurled more shells into the heart of Madrid today, scoring three direct hits on the telephone building, the tallest commercial structure in the city.

Several persons were injured in the streets as bricks and masonry tumbled down.

One shell struck the top floor, causing suspension of service on six elevators. A second hit the twelfth

2 Aged 'Cousins' Seeking to Share Zaharoff Fortune

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 22 (AP).—Two aged sisters who live alone in a cloistered villa by the Sea of Marmora laid claim today to the huge fortune of Sir Basil Zaharoff, the late "armaments king."

But not for themselves, they added quickly. The sisters, Iphigenia, 80, and Melpomeni, 70, want the money to go to the Greek and Turkish governments.

The two elderly women, residents of a villa at Kadikeuy, on the Asiatic coast, asserted they possess documentary evidence that they are first cousins of Zaharoff and therefore entitled to a share of his vast estate.

These papers, it was asserted, show that Zaharoff once was in partnership with the father of Iphigenia and Melpomeni, who owned a prosperous haberdashery at Scutari, on the Asiatic side of the Bosporus.

47 Killed, 28 Hurt By Blast in Shaft Of Mexican Mine

Eagle Pass, Tex., Dec. 22 (AP).—At least 47 miners were killed tonight in an explosion in shaft No. 6 of the Rosita Coal Mine Co. at Rosita, Coahuila, Mexico, 80 miles south of this border town.

Twenty-eight miners were injured. Some were expected to die. At least eight workmen were trapped in the shaft.

Information regarding the explosion was telephoned to Eagle Pass by Arthur Slaughter, acting manager. The Rosita company is a subsidiary of the American Smelting & Refining Co.

Rescuers held little hope of finding alive the eight miners entombed in the shaft. The explosion, the cause of which had not been determined, occurred at 11 a. m.

Antique Bas-relief Of Babylonian Lion On Way to Canada

Toronto, Dec. 22 (AP).—A lion which delighted the eye of Nebuchadnezzar, the chap who gave Babylon its reputation, today is on its way to Canada. Nebuchadnezzar's lion will require careful handling, not because of its ferocity but because of its antiquity.

Announcement of the lion's early arrival was made by Dr. C. T. Currelly, curator of the Royal Ontario Museum, who told its story.

He said the lion, made of baked clay, might require three months of careful handling if as he feared, salt was used in its composition. So it is likely to be well on in the new year before the lion is ready for public exhibition in the museum.

The lion, in bas-relief, was discovered by a pre-war German expedition along the great-walled way which ran from the palace in Babylon to the Ishter Gardens.

Pope Pius Begins Work on Message Despite Leg Pains

Vatican City, Dec. 22 (AP).—Pope Pius began working today upon the text of his Christmas Eve radio message to the world, greatly troubled by "atrocious pain" in his left leg but bearing up with "great patience."

The Pontiff remained in bed throughout the day, and it was possible he might speak his radio invocation of peace to the world without arising from his pillow.

He agreed to be brief, a compromise with physicians who felt he should not speak at all. The radio message will be at 12:30 p. m., Thursday (6:30 a. m., Eastern standard time).

Engineers from the Vatican radio station began running wires into the Pope's bedroom today, making it possible for him to address his blessing either from his bed or a nearby chair.

Despite the pain in his leg, a semiofficial Vatican bulletin said the Pope's health "continues to improve."

Suicide Identified As Lost Nephew Of N. Y. Capitalist

Port Arthur, Tex., Dec. 22 (AP).—A young man found hanging from a noose at Port Arthur's pleasure pier was identified today as Larry Lothar Glass, 28, missing nephew of a New York capitalist.

William B. Boyd, assistant superintendent of a detective agency, made the identification from a picture he brought here. The agency had been searching for Glass.

A coroner returned a verdict of suicide after the man was found Sunday night, dangling from a noose improvised from a handkerchief and two napkins. He was hanging from the iron bars of a window of the pleasure resort.

Glass, nephew of Herman Lissner, of New York, had been in Corinth, Miss., for several months learning the manufacturing business at the Weaver Pants Co. factory there. This concern was one of a chain of plants controlled by Lissner.

German born and a lawyer by profession, Glass had been missing since December 13, when he disappeared from a party.

Anglo-Egyptian Home Rule Pact Made Effective

Britain Will Maintain Only 10,000 in State as Suez Guard.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 22.—An Anglo-Egyptian treaty providing for end of British military occupation of Egypt and mutual assistance between the two countries came into force today with an exchange of richly-bound copies of the document.

Sir Miles Wedderburn Lampson, British commissioner who relinquished that post today to become first ambassador to Egypt, made the exchange with Wassef Pasha Ghali, Egyptian foreign minister.

The treaty was signed by representatives of the two countries August 26 and then was approved by both parliaments.

It came at the end of some 50 years of wrangling and strife between the two countries.

Both parties to the pact agreed that during the 20 years it is to be effective they would make no other treaty which was not consistent with it.

Under the pact, Egypt is to apply for membership in the League of Nations, under British auspices. The two governments would consult each other in an effort to settle peacefully any dispute with a third country which endangered severance of relations with that country.

Egypt agreed that if war occurs or is threatened, Great Britain may use its ports, airdromes and other facilities. Britain was authorized to keep a force not exceeding 10,000 land troops and 400 pilots around the Suez Canal.

Fireman on Alarm Finds Wife Ablaze In Virginia Home

Richmond, Va., Dec. 22 (AP).—A fire alarm early today sent members of Engine Company No. 15 speeding to 700 East Brookland Park boulevard.

"That's my house," exclaimed Jesse H. Lodge, truck driver of the company.

Smoke was pouring from a basement window. Lodge tried a rear door, found it locked, then smashed a cellar window and a moment later stumbled over the body of his wife, Mrs. Lottie May Lodge, lying unconscious with her clothing ablaze in the furnace room.

She died less than six and a half hours later in Memorial Hospital.

Appeals Court Upholds NLRB On Bargaining

Labor Peace Still Remote; Auto, Marine Strike Arbitration Fails.

The peace dove flew over strife-torn industrial plants and shipping centers of the country yesterday, uncertainly surveyed the situation—and flew away again.

By nightfall, the day's hopeful predictions of pre-Christmas peace in several of the outstanding disputes had been forgotten and lines were tightened grimly in numerous controversies.

In brief, these were the day's developments in labor's realm:

General Motors Corporation rejected the demand of the United Automobile Workers for a general conference on labor problems and referred Homer Martin, union head, to individual plant managers.

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the Labor Relations Board's authority to compel employers to bargain collectively with employes.

Secretary of Labor Perkins announced private industry had absorbed 1,100,000 unemployed during the current year and had increased its weekly pay roll by $50,500,000.

Mayor Frank Couzens, of Detroit, failed in efforts to end the "sit-down" strike in Kelsey-Hayes Co. plants which produce brakes for Ford Motor Co.

Ford Seeks Machinery.

Ford, meanwhile, moved to obtain some of his machinery that has been used by Kelsey-Hayes, presumably to start manufacturing the brakes himself.

Glen W. McCabe, directing a walkout of 14,000 flat glass workers at plants which supply much of the glass used by auto makers, said peace negotiations were "at a standstill."

Ten thousand drivers won an annual pay boost of $1,500,000 in an agreement with the Carting Exchange of Chicago.

Restaurants and hotel dining rooms in Rochester, N. Y., were tied up by the waiters' and cooks' strike.

Negotiations to end the West Coast maritime strike were suddenly terminated for the present.

Meanwhile, the United Press, in a copyrighted story from Washington, said a conference between Solicitor General Stanley Reed and Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes had resulted in postponement until February 8 of Supreme Court arguments on constitutionality of the national labor relations act.

The delay was asked by Reed, it

Two District Women Join Army Of Claimants to Garrett Estate

Two Washington women yesterday joined the army of 7,000 litigants and 1,700 attorneys who are battling in Philadelphia for the $18,000,000 estate of the late Mrs. Henrietta E. Garrett.

They are Mrs. George Brandt, 2936 Upton street northwest, and Mrs. George Lavally, 835 Whittier street northwest. Both are third cousins of Mrs. Garrett.

Mrs. Garrett died five years ago in Philadelphia, leaving a will which distributed $500,000 among her servants, but made no disposition of the remainder of the estate.

Mrs. Garrett had no children and so far as could be learned all members of her immediate family were dead. Attorneys began combing her family tree looking for heirs. They discovered Mrs. Garrett was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Christian Shafer and that her mother's maiden name was Margaret Henrichs.

The Henrichses came to this country from Lahr, Germany, where Mrs. Brandt was born. Mrs. Brandt's grandmother and Mrs. Garrett's mother were first cousins, the search revealed.

Last April Mrs. Brandt received a letter from a cousin in Lahr, Mrs. Phillip Werdier, informing her that attorneys were searching for descendants of the Henrichs family in an effort to settle an $18,000,000 estate.

Mrs. Brandt passed the news on to Mrs. Catherine W. Duvall, her aunt and mother of Mrs. Lavally, who is living with another daughter, Mrs. R. E. Humes, in Honolulu. Mrs. Duvall, it was revealed, was Mrs. Garrett's second cousin. Mrs. Duvall and Mrs. Humes forwarded from Honolulu their claims for a share of the estate.

Through Attorneys George Van Dee Berg and Thomas Hansford Patterson, Mrs. Brandt and Mrs. Lavally filed their claims in Philadelphia.

"It all seems so incredible I haven't even thought of the possibility of receiving a share of the estate," Mrs. Brandt declared. She

Holiday Toy, Doll Fund of Post Swelled by Paper's Employes

Swelled by a large gift from members of The Washington Post composing room force, The Post Toy and Doll Fund last night totaled $736.09.

Although only 31 separate items were listed among the cash contributions to the fund since Monday, more than 200 generous Post readers have sent in gifts, ranging from a dime to $10, during the last two days.

The 70 members of the composing room jointly contributed $30; Bill Bennings Fans each sent in a dime apiece; and Government employes, members of Lodge No. 31, A. F. G. E., and the Athletic and Recreational Association, gave $18.50.

Many of the contributions were sent in anonymously, some by mail to The Post, 1337 E street northwest, while other donors left their contributions at the counter in the lobby of The Post Building.

At the same time a flood of toys and dolls, both old and new were received by the Council of Social Agencies, which has volunteered to take care of distributing the gifts. Old toys and dolls were repaired and repainted to look like new at the Christmas Workshop, 1524 L street northwest.

Many contributors left their gifts at the special boxes in Loew's Capitol, Columbia and Palace theaters, or in the special baskets located in every Peoples Drug Store in the District. Other warm-hearted Post readers sent in their gifts by Terminal taxicabs. By calling Decatur 5130 you can arrange for a Terminal taxi to pick up your gift without charge.

Speculation continued to grow over the fund's most unusual gift to date—a collection of 248 old coins acknowledged yesterday morning. The collection, including a large variety of American half dimes, dimes and quarters struck in the early 1800's, will probably be offered to some private collector, the proceeds to go to the Toy and Doll Fund.

But more toys and dolls, and more contributions of money are sorely needed by the fund if it is to reach every youngster in the District on Friday morning, Daily hun-

Soviet Trucks Useless as Auto Program Fails

Russian Factories Unable to Produce Parts, or Passenger Cars.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Dec. 22.—Government reports today revealed serious failures in efforts to fulfill the Soviet's ambitious 1936 program for automobile production.

It was disclosed that 50 per cent of the trucks in the Soviet Union are idle because of lack of spare parts and that the number of broken down motor cars is mounting steadily.

Officials announced that the Gorky Automobile Plant, recently reorganized to produce the first all-Russian passenger car, is turning out only 15 or 20 cars a day instead of the 85 scheduled in the program. The plant's production for 1936 will be only 2,500 units instead of the production of 12,000 announced last February.

This passenger car is known as the M-Odin, in honor of V. M. Molotov, president of the council of commissars, and represents the Russian attempt to copy the 1932 model Ford. The units which have been put into use are said to have revealed defects in the motor, transmission and steering gear, all of which are of Soviet design.

Because of production troubles the Gorky plant recently was closed for six weeks, but things still are not running smoothly. The Moscow press reported that the conveyor in the plant still is stopped from 2 to 10 hours daily, while the production waste is enormous. December 12, 15 out of 24 cars produced were rejected by the inspectors.

V. Sokolov, director of the parts section of the automobile industry administration, reported:

"Because of the failure of plants to supply parts 50 per cent of the Zis-3, and Zis-5 and Gaz-A trucks idle. The situation is almost catastrophic. We are besieged by demands from everywhere for parts but we are helpless."

The trucks mentioned are turned out at the famous Stalin automobile plant, which the official organ, Pravda, charged was turning out only 59 per cent of its quota of accessories.

Lehman Opposes Mercy for Minors

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 22 (AP).—Gov. Lehman interrupted an executive clemency hearing today for six condemned murderers—three of them 21 years old or under—to express publicly for the first time opposition to abolition of capital punishment for those under 21.

"I frankly can see no difference in the guilt of a man who is 22 years of age and one who is 20," the Governor said.

"If we should modify the capital punishment law, I believe we would be taking a very great step backward."

The Governor's statement, offered in the presence of six lawyers, an assistant prosecutor and relatives of the condemned men, came after Daniel W. Blumenthal attempted o present a petition asking that the sentences of nine youth under 21 now in the Sing Sing death house, be commuted to life imprisonment.

Gravity of Problems Which Face President in Budget Balancing Now Clear.

By Franklyn Waltman.

THE hard facts about President Roosevelt's budget balancing problem are beginning to be realized. They are that unless the Federal Government abandons some of the functions which it has undertaken—and which the country apparently wants continued—we are destined to have an annual budget somewhat in excess of $6,000,000,000, excluding statutory debt retirement requirements.

WALTMAN.

This is a rather important fact to keep in mind in connection with the budgetary problem. It means that obtaining better than $6,000,000,000 of revenue annually to attain a balanced budget is a permanent, rather than a temporary necessity. It means that the permanent budget of the Federal Government in the years ahead will be approximately twice what it was in the seven years before the depression.

Although many persons in their thinking have proceeded on the theory that once economic recovery was fully achieved we would go back to normalcy—that is the pre-depression era—in Federal expenditures, the weight of history is against reverting to the lower levels. Some reductions from peaks, of course, are made and will be this time, but a new normal level is established higher than the previous one.

Thus, on the eve of the Civil War the Federal Government spent approximately $60,000,000 annually. During the conflict Federal expenditures shot up above $1,000,000,000 annually. After the war, the new level of expenditures approximated $300,000,000 annually, a sum which gradually increased with the growth of the country until the Treasury was spending in the neighborhood of $700,000,000 annually on the eve of American entry into the World War.

Treasury disbursements reached an all-time high peak of $18,000,000,000 in the 1919 fiscal year. With the ending of the war and the demobilization of the American fighting forces the annual expenditures dropped sharply until a leveling-out period was reached in 1922 at around $3,000,000,000, excluding statutory debt retirement requirements. In other words, the post-war level was roughly four times the pre-war level.

This post-war level was approximately maintained, with only slight increases, until 1930 when the necessities of the depression and the New Deal program sent Treasury disbursements to new peace-time highs. The peak was reached in the last fiscal year with payment of the soldiers' bonus bringing the total to $8,476,000,000, leaving out the debt retirement payment. The trend is again downward but it has become obvious that it will not be brought, even approximately, down to the pre-depression level.

Of course, a return to approximately the old annual expense figure could be achieved by abandoning all the new functions undertaken by the Federal Government in the last four years. But it cannot be achieved in any other way. Thus if an annual budget of less than $6,000,000,000 a year is desired, some of the present functions of the Federal Government must be abandoned and the budgetary problem becomes one of deciding what functions should be dropped—stock market control, assistance to agriculture, the CCC, improvement of rivers, Federal aid for highways or what?

The widespread belief that the budget can be substantially reduced by reorganizing the Federal Government is not borne out by similar undertakings by State governments. President Roosevelt fully realizes that little in the way of economy can be achieved by a reorganization program, even though from the viewpoint of efficiency and better administration such an undertaking is highly desirable.

Some duplications and some waste without doubt could be and should be eliminated by a reorganization plan. Certain bureaus should be merged, but when all this is done the saving is not large when compared with the total costs of these departments and agencies. At the best a comparatively few unnecessary officials here and there could be eliminated and their salaries saved, but such savings are but a drop in the bucket.

It has been estimated that the savings achieved through reorganization of State governments when that has been undertaken in the most efficient and effective manner has not been more than 2 or 3 per cent of the budgets of those States. The reorganizations, however, paid dividends in more efficient service to the people of those States.

Under the most favorable circumstances and the very best reorganization plan possible—probably not much more than $190,000,000 or $200,000,000 could be saved annually in Federal expenditures unless some of the existing functions of the Federal Government are abandoned or sharply curtailed—and if the latter is done there is certain to be a loud outcry such as is now coming from the mayors of American cities and other groups over suggestions for the curtailment of relief activities.

The problem of budget balancing appears substantially to be a problem of getting revenues up to more than $6,000,000,000 annually. Whether you like it or not, this is the situation.

said, on assumption Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, now ill, would be able by that time to participate in the decision. "It is possible," the article said, the vote of Justice Stone, a liberal, may decide the fate of the statute. His participation in the decision will definitely prevent another four-to-four tie such as that in the New York unemployment insurance case."

Martin, president of the Automobile Workers Union, which is backed by John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, is opening the drive for unionization of the automobile industry. He had sought a conference to discuss his charges that General Motors employes have been discharged for union activity, and had complained efforts to negotiate with plant managers were futile. Company officials said their action in referring him to plant managers is "in conformity with the corporation's operating policy."

Martin's next move is being awaited.

Secretary Perkins, here, earlier had voiced "optimism" over prospects of settling the controversy without a strike.

"Neither side has asked us formally to intervene in steel or automobiles," she said, "but we are in close touch with the situation."

The circuit court's ruling upholding authority of the Labor Relations Board was given in the appeal of the board's ruling against dismissal of seven employes by Agwilines, Inc., operating division of the Clyde Mallory Steamship Lines. The court overruled the company's contention that the board's orders violate the fifth amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting the taking of property without due process of law.

Plans Mapped For Tightening Neutrality Act

President Discusses Move to Include Civil Wars in Arms Ban.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt and Chairman McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, yesterday explored the question of bringing major civil wars, like that in Spain, within the scope of the Nation's neutrality law.

McReynolds said afterward he believed the President should be given discretionary authority to invoke the neutrality act in cases where such conflicts appeared likely to embroil other countries.

The law expires May 1 and plans are under consideration at the Capitol to renew it with some changes.

The act does not apply to civil wars. It provides for an embargo on arms shipments to two or more nations at war with each other. It also restricts loans and credits.

McReynolds said the Supreme Court's decision yesterday upholding the right of the President under the 1934 Chaco embargo act to ban shipments of arms to belligerent countries had been "mentioned" in today's White House parley.

"It is necessary for the President to have this authority," McReynolds said, "because he is in a position, with all his information, to determine when to or when not to act."

The court overruled a lower Federal court decision that Congress had illegally delegated embargo powers to the Chief Executive.

The Tennessean is planning to introduce legislation that would give the President discretion to forbid shipments to belligerents of materials that could be used for war purposes.

At a press conference yesterday, President Roosevelt said new neutrality legislation will be requested of Congress this session, but did not indicate the form it would take.

floor and plunged through two levels, exploding on the tenth.

The third ripped a great gap in the sixth floor wall, just above the offices of newspaper correspondents.

The artillery bombardment came shortly after Fascist airplanes bombed the Rosares district of northwestern Madrid, the first air attack on the capital in several days.

A government airplane crashed to the ground in flames as a number of Socialist ships drove off the attacking insurgent craft. Another plane, believed to be Fascist, also fell to earth.

In fighting around government-held villages west of Madrid, the Socialist administration declared its forces advanced in the region of Boadilla Del Monte, although the insurgents shelled that village as well as Pozuelo de Alarcon and Monclos.

In Northern Spain, said a war ministry statement, Socialist artillery set ablaze an arms factory and the telephone building at Oviedo.

U. S. to Move $6,000,000,000 In Gold to Fort in Wilds Soon

Transfer of 6,000 Tons of Bullion Planned to End Temptation to Potential Invaders; Shift to Be Guarded With Great Care.

By the Associated Press.

The long-delayed transfers of Uncle Sam's gold hoard to the fastness of a Kentucky fortress will begin shortly after January 1.

In the highly secret movement, expected since 1935, some 6,000 tons of gold bullion valued at about $6,000,000,000 will be moved from New York and Philadelphia to the new vault at Fort Knox, officials said.

A secret meeting of Treasury, Postal and Army officials has been called for next week, at which final plans for the transfer are expected to be approved.

When the transfer is completed the bulk of the Government's $10,600,000,000 gold stocks will be removed from coast cities to the interior. The purpose, authorities said, was to guarantee peace further by removing a possible temptation for invasion by a foreign force.

Site Called Invulnerable.

Army experts said it would be almost impossible for an alien power to reach Fort Knox, where the two-story vault of steel and stone stands in the middle of a 33,000-acre military reservation patrolled by a mechanized army unit.

It was learned Joseph Vick, postal inspector, had been selected to command the golden convoy, and that aides in New York and Philadelphia are constantly observing traffic and other safety conditions along carefully selected routes from Sub-Treasury and Assay Office vaults to railway stations.

The exact date of the shipments will be unknown to the public. Officials are counting on about 50 trips "staggered" over a period estimated at perhaps six months.

25 Million Per Train.

In each train there probably will be only four or five cargo cars, all of them armored. Officials fear long trains would be too conspicuous. Each car will carry $25,000,000 of bullion, protected behind sealed doors by an escort of railway mail guards.

In addition to the cars of gold, each special train will have cars containing postal inspectors and a regular army contingent of 32 men and two officers.

The bullion bars will be transported in canvas bags stamped "registered mail, special delivery." Informed sources said the Postoffice Department had decided to charge the Treasury only $100,000 for the transfer, which, at regular rates, would cost almost $19,000,000.

ministration to the Agriculture Department. Whether farm relief generally should come under the same group administering work relief is another question that is being studied. It was stated definitely that the creation of a new Cabinet department is in the study stage.

Secretary Ickes has been seeking to turn the Interior Department into a Department of Conservation and Public Works, but so long as the public works function is so inextricably tied up with relief it was considered doubtful that the Interior Department would take over the job.

Whether President Roosevelt will discuss reorganization in his forthcoming message to Congress or will include it in a later message has not been revealed.

Meanwhile, the President is studying the possibility of obtaining money to meet the relief situation during the next few months from other funds which could be transferred to the Works Progress Administration. He already has indicated that he will ask Congress for $500,000,000 to carry relief until June 30, but even this amount, unless supplemented by other funds, would result in a major reduction in relief expenditures.

Spain Wins Own Lottery.

Valencia, Spain, Dec. 22 (AP).—The Spanish Socialist government won first and second prizes today in its own Christmas lottery, totaling approximately $1,912,000. Gov. Smith to Appeal Ruling in Bank Case

Rutland, Vt., Dec. 22 (AP).—Municipal Court Judge Milford K. Smith late today allowed the State to amend and bring within the statute of limitations its charge that Gov. Charles M. Smith concealed thefts of a clerk of the Marble Savings Bank, of which the Governor is president.

By this action the State kept alive its warrant against the Governor, on whose behalf counsel contended charges were outlawed. Through his attorney, Fred E. Gleason, Gov. Smith, however, immediately appealed Judge Smith's decision to the State Supreme Court.

3 Army Fliers Hurt as Plane Dives to Ground

$90,000 Bomber Strikes Greenhouse Near Mitchel Field.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Three Army fliers were injured today when their bomber crashed near Mitchel Field, Long Island, while en route from Langley Field, Va., to Boston.

The plane cut through high voltage wires, crippling light and power service for 40,000 residents in Hempstead and Garden City.

The names of the injured men were given as Lieut. Glenn C. Thompson, Corpl. Moore and Private Lowney. They were taken to the Mitchel Field Hospital, where attaches said Moore was injured internally but the other two suffered only superficial cuts and bruises. Thompson, according to War Department records in Washington, is stationed at Langley Field.

In tearing through the wires, the $90,000 plane lost a wing and plunged to the ground at terrific speed.

The ship somersaulted, then crashed against a greenhouse 200 feet distant. The greenhouse was owned by August Gebhardt, who later said he "always knew" a plane would hit his house "sooner or later."

Gebhardt, his wife, Ledwig, and his brother, George, dragged the injured men from the demolished plane.

The plane was one of a squad of three, all from the Forty-ninth Bombing Squadron, which took off from Langley Field this morning on a training flight to Boston.

Deportation Faced for Theft Long Ago

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals will be asked to rule on the case of an Italian immigrant who has lived peacefully in this country for 16 years, but who now faces deportation because he stole $20 when he was a boy.

Appeal notice was served today by counsel for Salvatore Branchicella, 33-year-old Mamaroneck cobbler, after Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey had regretfully declined to interfere with deportation proceedings.

Judge Caffey, confronted with a law requiring the deportation of any applicant for citizenship who ever was involved in a crime of "moral turpitude," suggested the case be carried to President Roosevelt if the appeal failed.

As a result of a falling out with a neighbor, authorities learned that Branchicella and another boy had stolen the Italian equivalent of $20 when he was a 14-year-old apprentice shoemaker in Malveta, Italy.

Two Are Convicted in $100,000 Fraud

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 22 (AP).—A Federal court jury convicted a socially prominent Memphis investment banker and a bond salesman of charges that they participated in bond swindles totalling about $100,000. Martin deferred sentencing pending hearing of motions for new trials in January.

Firm Sold Out On Own Assets, SEC Contends

System of Loans, Mergers Described by Rockefeller Kin at Hearing.

A lawyer for the Securities Commission contended yesterday that David Milton, son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, jr., bought subsidiaries for his Equity Corporation with the subsidiaries' own money.

Milton, a witness in the commission's investigation of investment trusts, objected to this interpretation of his activities, though agreeing as to the processes followed.

David Schenker, commission counsel, showed that in several instances bank loans were used to buy a controlling stock interest and then repaid with assets of the company thus acquired.

Milton declared that Equity Corporation was "a continuing corporation," and insisted no impropriety was involved.

In December, 1934, the testimony revealed, Equity borrowed $2,280,000 and by March 25 had increased this borrowing to $3,300,000. With the money, Equity bought stock of Interstate Equities, Chain and General Corporation and Reliance Corporation.

In March, Interstate Equities and Chain and General were merged with Equity Corporation and $2,000,000,000 of Equity's indebtedness at the bank was paid off with assets of these companies, leaving a balance due of $1,300,000.

New Merger Effected.

This was increased with passing weeks to $2,000,000, with Equity meanwhile buying more and more stock in Reliance. Reliance at the same time was investing in American, British and Continental. finally, in September, both Reliance and American, British and Continental were merged with Equity and the bank loan paid in full from thei rassets.

It was expected that Schenker, at the close of today's hearing, would nounce some recommendations for legisaltion to control investment trust practices.

Youth Sent to Prison by Mistake Gets Release as Christmas Gift

'Powerful Happy,' Says North Carolina Prisoner on Hearing of Exoneration; Parents and Neighbors Arrange 'Big Shin-dig.'

By the United Press.

Central State Prison, Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 22.—Harrison Starnes, a freckled-faced 21-year-old youth, got the biggest Christmas present of his life today three days early, and he said he was "powerful happy."

Warden H. H. Honeycutt told Harrison he could go home.

"The parole office has discovered you are innocent," the warden told Harrison. "They know you didn't commit the robbery."

Harrison was mighty pleased. He thanked the warden and said he guessed he would leave just as soon as he could.

The Union County youth was convicted last May of highway robbery and sentenced to serve five years in prison. He said he never robbed anybody. But a jury didn't believe him. It took the word of 73-year-old W. P. Plyler, who said he knew it was Harrison who robbed him because he "had freckles on his arms."

Harrison's tobacco-chewing mother and his hymn-singing father walked into the warden's office today to take their boy home.

"We are having a big shin-dig tonight fer you and all the folks in the neighborhood will be there," the father told him.

Harrison's eyes sparkled.

Tydings Denies Filipino Scheming

By the Associated Press.

Senator Tydings, Democrat, of Maryland, author of the Philippine independence act, yesterday denied that the Philippine commonwealth's military program constituted a "covert conspiracy" to keep the United States in the Islands.

He took issue with statements by the Foreign Policy Association, a private organization of research and comment. It said recently that an attempt apparently was being made, under American military authorities, to make the islands a strategic asset to the United States.

Tydings said the Filipino government, in adopting a program suggested by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, former chief of staff of the American Army, was acting "without either the sanction, approval or disapproval of the United States Government."

Kirby, detailed with the "shopping squad" to detect shoplifters during the Christmas rush, arrested the woman after she is alleged to have taken four dresses from the store.

While he was taking her to a patrol box she bit him, Kirby said. The woman, Rosie E. Jones, colored, of 2226 Sixth street northwest, was charged with petty larceny.

said she never had heard of Mrs. Garrett until she received the letter from Germany.

The contest over the estate, Van Den Berg said, is one of the most unusual in American legal annals. When the case was called for a hearing in September the 1,700 attorneys filed appearances for hopeful "heirs" in every part of the world. It will take years to settle the case, the attorney predicted.

"I won't be disappointed if we receive nothing," Mrs. Brandt said. "We haven't looked forward to receiving anything and there are so many people claiming to be heirs our case seems rather hopeless. Still you never can tell."

Chaco Dispute End in Sight In Buenos Aires

'Green Hell' Settlement Expected by Final Session Today.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 22.—The Inter-American Peace Conference, close to adjournment, started a drive tonight to try to settle the dispute between Paraguay and Bolivia over the "Green Hell" strip of jungle called the Gran Chaco.

The decision of Foreign Minister Juan Stefanich, of Paraguay, to fly here for tomorrow's session raised high hope among diplomats that a peaceful end might be brought to the dispute that has caused much bloodshed.

The Inter-American Peace Conference will co-operate with the Chaco Peace Conference in the attempt to adjust the differences between the two nations in the heart of South America.

It was announced officially from Asuncion that Stefanich would leave the Paraguayan capital by airplane at 7 a. m. tomorrow. He will reach here five hours later.

Paraguay and Bolivia are the only nations represented at the inter-American parley which do not maintain diplomatic relations with each other.

Perfect Climax for Session.

Settlement of the dispute, which led to the savage, three-year Chaco war, would be fitting climax to the inter-American deliberations and Foreign Minister Carlos Saavedra Lamas, of Argentina, president of the conference, has spared no effort to achieve a solution.

There was no session today of the Inter-American Conference. The Chaco Peace Conference, formed by delegates of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, Uruguay and the United States, held a two-hour meeting in an effort to draft some workable agreement.

A special committee of three, composed of Foreign Ministers Miguel Cruchaga Tocornal and Jose Carlos de Macedo Soares, of Chile, and Brazil, respectively, and Spruille Braden, of the United States, reported on conversations held with Paraguayan delegates to both parleys.

Optimism Marks Visit.

There was a definite atmosphere of optimism because of Stefanich's decision to come to Buenos Aires and the declaration of Miguel Angel Soler, Paraguayan delegate, to yesterday's plenary session of the Inter-American Conference that he believed "solution of the Chaco question is imminent."

Foreign Minister Enrique Finot, of Bolivia, has been present at the conference since it was opened December 1.

Meanwhile, delegates to the Inter-American Conference made preparations to leave Buenos Aires after tomorrow's session, which will close the historic meeting. United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Saavedra Lamas and Carlos Concha, of Peru, are scheduled to address the final session. Hull was expected to leave for the United States on Saturday.

It was reported that Cruchaga Tocornal and Macedo Soares may remain here until December 27 to complete the Chaco details.

dreds of new cases of needy families, of children who face a joyless, giftless Christmas, are acknowledged by the Council of Social Agencies.

Christmas is only two days off—only two days left in which to help one more unfortunate youngster. Won't you help?

Santa Claus badly needs support. There are 20,000 youngsters in the District who will have no Christmas at all unless Washingtonians come to the rescue.

Everything can be used. Old and dilapidated toys and dolls can be made like new; a plaything ready for discard may mean a world of happiness to some child on Christmas morning. Even a nickel or a dime will mean the difference between a cold, heartless December 25 and the Christmas more favored youngsters enjoy.

Overhead Eliminated.

None of the contributions is diverted to meet overhead expenses. Station WJSV, Loew's Theater, People's Drug Stores, the Terminal Transportation Co. and The Washington Post have all donated their services. The Council of Social Agencies, the Christmas Workshop and the Santa Claus Center are manned by volunteer workers who are contributing their share of Christmas joy to Washington's poorest youngsters.

Storm Imperils Party Climbing To Plane Wreck

Fruitless Utah Search for Second Airliner Pushed by Army Bombers.

By the Associated Press.

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 22.—A fierce storm tonight caused fears for the safety of rescuers struggling up a brush-tangled mountain slope in North Idaho toward wreckage of an airliner lost Friday with its two crew members.

Army bombers were thrown into the long-drawn hunt in Utah for a second transport ship and its seven occupants, missing more than a week.

Twelve hardened woodsmen encountered a blizzard as they toiled toward the summit of Cemetery Ridge south of Kellogg, Idaho, where Pilots Joe Livermore and Arthur A. Haid crashed last Friday in a Northwest Airlines mail plane.

A. R. Mensing, Northwest Airlines official, said the storm was so severe the rescuers probably would have to "hole up" for their own protection.

An Army bomber from March Field joined the hunt at Milford, Utah, for the lost Western Air Express plane and a similar plane was assigned to the search from Salt Lake City while still another ship dropped 10,000 notices of a $1,000 reward to the finder.

Planes and ground parties were dispatched to investigate reports that a plane aparently in distress had been heard northwest of Jericho, near the Los Angeles-Salt Lake City air line, and the flares had been seen Wednesday night near Bear Claw Peak, northeast of Milford. The plane vanished last Tuesday.

Other searchers headed into the mountains southeast of Salt Lake City, to follow up the report of a volunteer, Ben Bates, that he saw a broken tree and "several other indications" a plane might have plunged into a deep gorge.

The report came to an army of ground and aerial searchers which for a week has tracked down a maze of false clews. Allen Barrie, Western Air Express vice president, said his men were moving the center of their search to Milford, 180 miles south.

in Peiping who previously had wired him urging release of Gen. Chiang.

Reflecting widespread conviction in Nanking that the crisis can be settled only after a long-drawn contest of wits and patience, the government tonight decreed all New Year celebration must be canceled.

Nanking's despair of an early settlement also was shown by action of the Executive Yuan (council) tantamount to official recognition that a state of civil war exists. The council abolished the local government of Shensi Province, bringing all provincial affairs under Nanking's direct control and branding local officials as "rebels who have forfeited all administrative rights."

This action indicated Shensi would be pacified as conquered rebel territory when—or if—the government succeeds in putting down the revolt.

Military movements of loyal divisions converging on Sianfu continued today, but reports of actual combat with the rebels were lacking.

American Government and mission authorities expressed serious alarm concerning the safety of foreigners in Lanchow, capital of Kansu Province, which yesterday was reported to have joined the Shensi uprising.

The American Embassy at Peiping telegraphed missionaries at Lanchow suggesting that they evacuate Kansu Province because of disorders and the nearness of Communist troops. No reply had been received tonight and there was no assurance that the message had been delivered.

"We have had enough of this!"

Cleric Renews Attack.

London, Dec. 22 (AP).—The Archbishop of York today resumed the Church of England's attack on the love affair of former King Edward and tonight high dignitaries of the church united in a movement to "call the people of England back to things Godly."

The archbishop in a diocesan letterday today said:

"It has happened that many a man before now has found himself beginning to fall in love with another man's wife. That is the moment of critical decision, and the right decision is that they should cease to meet before passion is so developed as to create an agonizing conflict between love and duty.

"That decision has often been taken by men of honor."

Tonight the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York and the Bishop of Bradford urged that the people rededicate themselves to religion during the coronation of King George VI. The Archbishop of Canterbury will broadcast an appeal for a religious revival over British Broadcasting System facilities at 7:55 p. m., December 27. Recordings will be relayed to the dominions during popular hours.

The intended broadcast was described by church sources as a "clarion call for the nation to consider whether the time has arrived when there should be a return, in some measure, to religion."

In his letter, the Archbishop of York declared the former King should never have permitted himself to fall in love with Mrs. Wallis Simpson, and urged:

"Let us prepared ourselves to enter into the full meaning of the coronation as a rededication of our whole national life and of ourselves, as citizens."

The Bishop of Bradford, writing in the Diocesan Messenger, declared Edward's choice of Mrs. Simpson, rather than the throne, was "a human tragedy," and "we all regret it and mourn that he chose as he did."

He added it was the people's "duty to wreathe the coronation with their prayers and "self-dedication," appealed for avoidance of "cheap sentiment," and characterized as "silly" a report "that I am inviting you to paint the churches red, white and blue."

In somewhat different tenor, Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard urged British "restraint" now that the crisis "has ended," and deplored what it called the Archbishop of York's pursuit of Canterbury's "unhappy example" in criticizing the former King.

Concerning the Archbishop of York, the newspaper said:

"His grace sees fit not merely to criticize Edward in words which are wounding the public, but gives currency to a false view of the late crisis."

Of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Evening Standard said his "broadcast criticism of the ex-King's friends * * * aroused disapproval which was not one-sided but universal."

"Edward never at any time showed the slightest disposition to depart from the sound, established, constitutional practice of the realm," said the Standard.

It was stated the Archbishop of Canterbury's forthcoming radio message had no connection with Edward and the crisis, although church sources acknowledged his grace might make passing reference to the affair.

Beard Gamblers' Pleas for Pardon Believed Doomed

Twelve gamblers convicted with "Big Sam" Beard of running an illegal race track booking and information service probably will not receive a favorable reaction on their pardon applications, according to the office of United States Pardon Attorney Daniel M. Lyons.

Convicts cannot be pardoned until they have served a year, except under unusual circumstances. Since the 12 men began sentence April 17, 1936, they are not eligible for parole.

A further obstacle is the fact United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett opposes a pardon. He was the prosecutor. Justice Joseph W. Cox, who presided, has recommended a pardon. Approval by both is customarily required.

Sam Beard, so-called "master mind" of the Capital's gambling element, received a two-to-six-year sentence and is not eligible for leniency.

Seeking clemency are William Carroll, James T. Gallagher, Fred H. Heck, George E. Hutchins, Melville G. Jacobs, Sidney Kaplan, Lewis L. Levy, Fred J. Meese, Timothy H. Noel, Joseph A. O'Callaghan, John J. Sortori and William G. Smith.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 22 (AP).—The executive committee of the University of Wisconsin board of regents tonight set January 6 and 7 as the tentative dates for an open hearing on charges against President Glenn Frank.

The committee announced it had turned down a plea of the president for additional time to prepare a defense against the charges made December 16 by Harold M. Wilkie, president of the board.

Lemke, Licked But Undaunted, Bounces Back

Third Party Hope Returns to D. C., Still Hopeful Day Will Come.

By Robert C. Albright.

He came back smiling, still flaunting the Union Party's trampled standard, singing the same praises of Dr. Townsend and Father Coughlin and dreaming the same dreams of an economic millenium.

Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, has "no regrets." He said so. As a third party candidate he was hopelessly licked in the Presidential election because the American electorate chose the course of "expediency" and "voted to continue their little sandwich." He said that, too, and grinned when he said it.

Education Needed.

The lanky, freckle-faced man from Fargo said a number of other things about money, farming, technocracy and banking, but they all boiled down to a statement that the American public needed "further educating" and he will help the process along with the following 4-point program at this session of Congress:

1. A new edition of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage refinancing bill, further scaling down farm interest rates.

2. A central bank bill, that would call in all Federal Reserve notes and issue instead United States notes on which Federal Reserve banks would pay interest.

3. A constitutional amendment, providing for popular initiation of legislation.

4. A water conservation bill.

Lemke has original ideas about money, but when reporters yesterday got tangled up in his definitions, he told them:

"I'm not so much interested in money. I guess I'm really a technocrat."

He has two current heroes. One is Father Charles E. Coughlin, who, he says one of these days may emerge as the Nation's savior. The other is Dr. Francis E. Townsend, who he thinks has done more than any other one man to make the Nation social conscious.

Some of His Views.

Here are a few Lemke observations in a brief interview:

Politics—

"The Union Party is here to stay. It will be active in the next Congressional elections, not with the idea of opposing members who support progressive measures, but opposing those who do not . . . The American people are progressive. They have no confidence in their future under either Democratic or Republican administrations. They voted Democratic because of fear."

Father Coughlin—

"He is a genius—one of the world's great men. He's still in the fight. I am satisfied that whenever the Nation needs him he will be there."

Gold sterilization—

"I can't see any possible good, or any possible harm that could come of it. But I hope some day there will be an earthquake, and all of that gold buried down in Kentucky will be lost. What is that gold now good for—not even for filling teeth."

Inflation—

"Our currency was inflated about $1,000,000,000 between May 1 and November, by issuance of silver certificates and Federal Reserve notes. It was done for election purposes, and the present credit action is partly to offset it. I don't object to the inflation, I don't even object to the purpose."

Money—

"We ought to get away from the idea of credit, and tying the dollar to any one commodity. We ought to use 1,000 of the principal commercial commodities as a base, with Congress establishing the base lines, using the average values for a year. The best basis for money would be all of the gold, copper, earth and other commodities in the world, and even the people of the present and futures generations."

Farm credit—

"I know that more farmers now are losing their farms than in any period in history. Farm land banks are foreclosing mortgages at the rate of 945 a week. Even before the election, the HOLC was making foreclosures at the rate of 1,370 a week."

Economics—

"The only reason the present system can exist is because it constantly breaks down of itself, and starts out afresh. There have been 36 major panics in this country, and the average business lasts only 3 years. We are now headed for another collapse."

History—

Peter Minuit bought the Island of Manhattan from the Indians for $24 and the Indians are supposed to have been cheated. Actually, the Indians cheated Minuit. That $24 invested at 6 per cent would be worth $28,000,000,000 today. That would buy back the island and leave enough over for a trip around the world."

Shirtless Washington Cleaned for Xmas

Workmen at Smithsonian Institution yesterday washed penciled wise cracks from this 95-year-old statue portraying Washington as a Roman Senator.

'Nudish' Statue of Washington Washed Clear of Wisecracks

20-Ton 'White Elephant' Depicting First President as Bare-Chested Hero Requires Frequent Scrubbings at Smithsonian.

The "Naked" Washington, perhaps the most abused piece of sculpture in American history, got a bath yesterday. Tourists have been scrawling modern wisecracks on the 96-year-old statue, and a janitor in the Smithsonian Institution set out to erase them with a sponge and water.

"I suppose it's because they think it looks funny," the janitor philosophized," but sightseers sure do write a lot of things on Mr. Washington."

Some of the scrawls were "Nuts!" "Hi, Toots!" and "Keep Your Shirt On!"

The writing of these slurs constitutes the latest link in a chain of ignominious events that have harassed custodians of the 20-ton statue since it was completed by Horatio Greenough in 1840.

Trouble started when the boat bringing the statue from Italy sank off the New England Coast and the memorial to the father of the country—his chest bulging like a muscle-bound wrestler's—bogged down in the mud. There are some who still contend that was a fitting place for it.

Congress, which had ordered the statue, sent a battleship to New England, raised the monument and brought it to Washington. Not until the statue was unveiled did Congress learn what it had bought—20 tons of the First President dressed as a Roman Senator, his chest bare and his feet in sandals.

Congress refused to allow the statue inside the Capitol. They left it on the lawn and built a house around it. Finally, someone said the house was almost as bad an eyesore as the statue, so Congress asked the District to take the heroic work of art off the Capitol lawn.

The District refused and the statue was bundled off to the Smithsonian Institution, much to the dismay of officials there.

The Smithsonian officials hid the statue in a gloomy recess among some antique printing presses. They thought it would be safe from ridicule there.

But tourists wandering aimlessly through the corridors come across it, stand awed for a moment and then reach for the pencils.

"What they write don't stay on Mr. Washington long though. I keep a pretty close watch on him," the janitor said.

The janitor said he did not know what the Latin inscription carved by Greenough on the base of the statue meant, but he was pretty sure it was not a wisecrack.

"I just wash off the wisecracks," he explained.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Department of Agriculture Orchestra, under Dr. Walter Bauer, with Elsa Koppel, soprano, as soloist. Program: Concerto Grosso for Christmas Eve (Corelli), "Sleepers, Awake" from Cantata No. 140 (Bach), Adagietto from Symphony No. 5 (Mahler), Songs with orchestral accompaniment: "Where'er You Walk" (Handel), "Cantique de Noel" (Adam), "Marias Wiegenlied" (Reger), "Von Himmel Hoch" (arr. Walter Bauer), two traditional Christmas carols (arr. August Damm).

Whatever may be its shortcomings, this orchestra has the merit of being amateur in the true sense of the word. The musicians are earnestly engrossed in what they are doing and they play for the sheer enjoyment of making music together. Last evening's audience, like others that have preceded it, seemed to appreciate this genuineness of unpretentious purpose and displayed a hearty encouragement.

Dr. Walter Bauer, as the drill-master and mentor of the group, is pursuing exactly the right way to stimulate interest of both the musicians themselves and the public that listens. Instead of confining his willing charges to the practice of the familiar standard orchestral repertoire, he places before them compositions which they would be unlikely to encounter without his guiding choice.

Corelli's concerto grosso is a charming work well endowed with melody and with the formal graces of its epoch. The simplicity of the music might be mistaken for naivete, were it not for the ingenuity of the writing for strings. Yet Corelli's skill on the violin did not in this case lead him to any vainglorious display as a composer, for his intent was reverent. The movements are filled with a grave joy, with a jubilation restrained by a sense of worship.

The Bach excerpt is one frequently heard in choral form but none the less pleasurable in instrumental guise. No better companion piece for the professed religious music of Bach and Corelli could have been selected than the adagieito from Mahler's fifth symphony. For Mahler was in character a mystic who saw the supernatural in the natural, the supernal transfiguring the material world.

One would judge that Elsa Koppel is not accustomed to orchestral support and that the novelty of the occasion resulted in unease. That would at least explain the uncertainties of her singing and account for one's feeling that she was not doing herself justice. There was considerable unsteadiness of tone and a tendency to miss the exact pitch.

Federal Jurors Indict 26 Major Oil Companies

70 Executives Are Blamed, Also, in Anti-Trust Law Violations.

By the United Press.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 22.—Federal grand jurors late today voted new indictments against 26 major Midwestern oil companies on charges of antitrust law violations.

The indictments contained charges similar to those returned July 28 and November 6 by a previous grand jury whose legality defendants challenged. With one or two exceptions they also applied to 70 executives of these companies previously indicted.

A conspiracy which raised and fixed the price of gasoline was alleged in one indictment. It named 24 companies and 54 executives.

Keith Fanshier, petroleum editor of the Chicago Journal of Commerce, his paper, and Warren C. Platt, Cleveland, Ohio, and his publications, National Petroleum News and Platt's Oilgram, also were indicted again as assertedly participating in such a conspiracy. A combination controlling jobbers' margins and setting uniform jobber policies was alleged in another indictment applying to 23 companies and 46 executives. William A. Tracy, Fort Worth, Tex., also was re-indicted on charges of perjury.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings authorized the investigation of the oil industry in April and the first grand jury began its work last May. Upon completion of its efforts the defendants asked that the indictments be quashed, charging the grand jury had not been drawn in strict accordance with Federal laws and included "hand-picked" members.

35 Paper Carriers In Christmas Party

Colored carrier boys, 35 in all, representing five northwest Post stations organized under the N. B. A., gathered last night in Christmas celebration at their T street station, to establish a stronger spirit of understanding and co-operation and to receive seasonal awards for service rendered.

Gathered around a Christmas tree decorated for the occasion, the group extended felicitations to their station managers, who passed out supplies of fruit and sweetmeats and words of praise and encouragement.

Representatives from the editorial and circulation departments of the paper made brief talks to the carriers, stressing fraternal principles of the N. B. A. organization, and value of business training and character devlopment, especially reliability and dependability, to be gained in the service.

Art 'Comes Natural,' Says Stage Screamer

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Phyllis Bolce, a professional screamer now screaming in behalf of the WPA, today told the secret of her success—

The heavier a lady is, she said, the better she can scream.

"Screaming," said Mrs. Bolce, who gets $23.87 a week for doing that once a night in a WPA play, "must be spontaneous. You can't learn how to scream. It just comes natural. You can either do it or you can't, and there's no use trying to do it if you aren't made that way."

Mission Will Hold Party Tomorrow

Music for the program will be furnished by the United States Marine Band. The Capitol management has donated the theater for the occasion.

On Christmas Day the mission will feed 800 needy men at its building at 613 C street northwest.

Sales Tax 'Revolt' Threat in Alabama

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 22 (AP).—Threats of open revolt and court action were heard today as the State moved to place its new 1½ per cent gross receipts tax on retail sales and amusements in effect January 1.

Gov. Bibb Graves instructed the State tax commission to complete machinery for collection of the tax. He declared the matter "is of the gravest importance" and urged the tax commissioners to give it "the right of way."

A Gadsen merchants group says it will not pay the tax or collect a State sales tax if one is levied.

Roosevelt's Kin Appointed Aide For Inaugural

Frederic A. Delano Will Assist Grayson; 4 Others Named as Chairmen.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and an uncle of President Roosevelt, was named yesterday as vice chairman of the inaugural committee.

And at the same time, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, general chairman of the committee, announced appointments of four subcommittee chairmen—J. Fred Essary, local newspaper correspondent, programs; James A. Councilor, budget and auditing; Thomas E. Lodge, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, civic co-operation, and Ford E. Young, civic decorations.

Delano wil lact as aid to Admiral Grayson and assist in general arrangements.

Advertising Absent.

Essary, assigned to complete plans for an official inaugural program, handled the same job at President Roosevelt's first induction. There will be only one "official" program, Admiral Grayson said.

"There will be no advertising of any form in the program," he added, "and any solicitation of advertising for any 'official' program will be without authority of the inaugural committee."

The program, it was announced, will be sold on newsstands and by salesmen along the parade route. It will be illustrated and contain textual matters relating to past inaugurals, Grayson said.

Meanwhile, James A. Councilor, chairman of the budgeting and auditing committee, announced that contributors to the guaranty fund would be assured careful handling as regarded their money.

Goal Set at $100,000.

The objective of the finance committee, charged with raising funds to pay inaugural expenses, is a total of $100,000. In contributing to this fund, the underwriters of the inaugural are assured that their contributions will be returned to them to the extent that funds are available from the net operating revenues of the undertaking.

Admiral Grayson also announced the personnel of two other committees. The public order committee, under the chairmanship of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, will include:

Maj. E. W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police Department, vice chairman; Floyd E. Davis, Edward A. Dent, District surveyor; E. Emery Gallihet; J. B. Gordon, District sanitary engineer; Richmond B. Keech, public utilities commissioner; Maj. Harry Leonard, Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, head of the Police Women's Bureau; Odell S. Smith, William A. Colvin, jr., John O. Gheen, Fred A. Smith, John Marshall, John Saul, Charles E. Schrom, chief, District of Columbia Fire Department; Henry C. Nestor, Ralph A. Norton, Clyde Burton.

135 Women Elected to Legislatures, League of Women Voters Reveals Figures Represent Gain of 5 Over Last Year; Decline Checked.

The National League of Women Voters has been busily checking how the women of the Nation fared in the last election and have found, according to a statement issued for publication this morning, 135 women will be members of 1937 Legislaures in States, or a gain of five over 1936.

This is in contrast to the annual decline recorded since 1929. In that year, a peak in women's representation, there were 149 women serving. In 1936, there were 130 women, according to Miss Marguerite M. Wells, president.

The Democratic sweep is reflected in the political affiliations of the women legislators, particularly in the West. But six Republican women will be serving in Legislatures west of the Alleghenies. The remaining 48, in a total of 54, are from Maine, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont, New York and New Jersey.

Politically, the women members will line up as follows:

Democrats, 75.
Republicans, 54.
Nonpartisans, 2.
Republican and Democratic indorsement, 3.
Independent Republican, 1.

In State Senates, there will be 12 women, a gain of one over the last two years.

Seven States, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Vermont, Maine, New Mexico, Washington and Utah, will have the largest number of women legislators. New Hampshire leads with 19. Connecticut follows with 18, and Vermont, with 14. In each of these States, the Legislature has several hundred members.

Testimony is given to the success and popularity of many women Legislators. Of the 1937 total representation, 60, or 44 per cent, are re-elections. Many are serving third, fourth and fifth terms. Outstanding in length of service is Miss Eleanor Miller, a Republican, who has been a member of the California House since 1922. Minnesota's two "nonpartisans"—Mrs. Mabeth H. Paige and Mrs. Hanna Kempfer — have responded to legislative roll calls since 1923. Mrs. Rhoda Fox Graves, Republican member of New York Senate, has served ten years in the Assembly and Senate. Mrs. Kate E. Taylor, Republican, of Vermont, and Mrs. Margaret H. Barden, Democrat, of New Hampshire, will begin their seventh term next month.

In 14 State, there are no women legislators. The States are Arkansas, Delaware, Florida, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Montana, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, Virginia and Wyoming.

Women increased their representation in Connecticut, Maine, New Hampshire, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Rhode Island, Alabama, Georgia, Idaho, Michigan and Tennessee. Losses in strength are noted in Arkansas, Massachusetts, Washington, Mississippi, New Jersey, Kansas, Kentucky, Nebraska, Nevada, Texas and Utah.

Legislatures in 43 States will be in regular session in 1937. The exceptions, unless there is an extraordinary session call, are Alabama, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia. All but two of the 43 States—Florida and Georgia—meet in January.

The holiday program tea of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association in honor of Dr. Mary Swartz Rose will be held in A. A. U. W. clubhouse December 30 from 4:30 to 6 p. m.

Following tea there will be a reception and Mrs. Rose will speak on recent significant developments in the nutrition field.

Dr. Rose and other nutrition leaders will be in Washington attending a conference on college hygiene at the Wardman Park Hotel, December 28-31. This conference will be open to members of the association. There will be round table discussions for which no formal program has been announced.

A program of business and pleasure awaits delegates who will attend meetings next month of the affiliated clubs of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. John Nance Garner will be honor guests at a tea at the clubhouse the second day of the meeting, January 19, in which Miss Mary Dewson, long a leader in feminine ranks of the Democratic Party, will take a prominent part.

The Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins, and Senate Leader Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, are the speakers scheduled for the dinner January 18. At the luncheon the following day brief addresses will be heard from Senator Caraway, Representative Mary T. Norton, Representative Virginia Jenckes, Caroline O'Day and Nannie Wood Honeyman. Preceding the luncheon each of the affiliated clubs represented—there are 87 on the list—will have an opportunity to tell briefly its part in the past campaign.

Affiliated Women Democrat Clubs to Have Fete Here Jan. 18.

Washington League for the Hard of Hearing, 1116 Vermont avenue northwest, will have its Christmas party on next Saturday evening in the league rooms. Contract bridge will be featured, but there will be tables for any other games for which prizes and refreshments will be offered. Santa Claus will appear as usual. This event of the year is in charge of Miss Nora D. Hill.

500 Christmas Guests Attend Realtors' Party

Business Improvement Is Mirrored by Enthusiasm of Record Crowd.

Approximately 500 members and guests attended the third annual Christmas party of the Washington Real Estate Board yesterday in the ball room of the Mayflower Hotel, setting records from standpoints of success, size and enjoyability. Improvement in the real estate business in the Capital has been strikingly reflected in the growth of these affairs, attendance at the original being but 97 and that at last year's about 300.

Following a reception, the party began with a luncheon during which Miss Ida Clarke, organist at the Shoreham Hotel, played Christmas carols and popular melodies. In the absence of President F. L. Sandoz, because of illness, Morton J. Luchs, first vice president, presided, and introduced Morris Cafritz, chairman of the program committee.

Cafritz presented guests and prominent members of the board at the head of the table, including President Melvin C. Hazen, of the District Board of Commissioners; John L. Weaver and William C. Miller past presidents, National Association of Real Estate Boards; Waverly Taylor, a director of the national association; Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway engineer; E. A. Dent, District surveyor; Lieut. Col. Raymond A. Wheeler, former Assistant District Engineer Commissioner; J. B. Gordon, District sanitary engineer; Capt. Hugh P. Oram, District director of inspection; Col. John W. Oehmann, District inspector of buildings; Guy T. O. Hollyday, past president, Baltimore Real Estate Board; A. C. Houghton, Harry K. Boss, Harold E. Doyle, H. Clifford Bangs, F. Eliot Middleton, Ben T. Webster, John F. Maury, Thomas E. Jarrell, H. L. Rust, jr., past presidents of the local board; Roger J. Whiteford, its counsel; Francis A. Murray, second vice president; J. McKenney Berry, a director, and Vincent Tutching, Howard Parish, James Y. Newton, and Thomas M. Cahill, representing the press.

Chairman Cafritz also introduced Santa Claus, impersonated by Edward R. Carr, who, assisted by Misses Mary Richards and Beth Hayes, as elves, distributed 100 gifts to the guests. They ranged from a live pig, life turkeys, geese and guinea fowl, to a refrigerator and pocket knives.

Assisting Cafritz on the program committee were Morgan Callahan, A. D. Crumbaugh, J. Lee Donnelly, Harvey L. Jones, Frank J. Luchs, John F. Maury, Fred A. Smith, S. S. Spruce and J. C. Weedon, jr. February 13 and the Willard Hotel were announced as date and place of the board's annual midwinter dinner and dance.

'Jay-Walking' Fines Killed by LaGuardia

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Aldermen's proposals to "regulate" New York pedestrians were described as infeasible today by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, who commented:

"I prefer the happiness of our unorganized imperfection to the gloom of organized imperfection of other countries."

Eliminating "jay-walking" penalties from a new traffic code he signed to go into effect February 10, the mayor said:

"The regulation of motor vehicle traffic * * * must undergo a period of training * * * before we can impose the danger of fine and imprisonment on those who walk the streets."

Nazi, Soviet Education Breed Slavish Citizens, Einstein Says

System Should Build Rounded Character, Scientist Asserts.

By the United Press.

Boston, Dec. 22. — Prof. Albert Einstein, world-famed mathematician, charged in his undelivered Harvard tercentenary address that educational methods in Russia and his native Germany breed "Slavish citizens," it was revealed tonight.

Illness had prevented Einstein from expounding his views on education at Harvard's 300th anniversary celebration last September. Text of the address, titled "The Education We Need," and originally written in German, wil be published tomorrow in the Christian Register Weekly.

Attacking use of discipline by educators, Einstein asserts in his article that "the worst thing that can happen . . . is to have a school deal principally in terms of fear, force and artificial authority."

Breeds Slavish Citizens.

"Such treatment," he adds, "destroys all sense of life, sincerity and self-confidence in the students. It breeds slavish citizens. It is no wonder that such schools are typical of Germany and Russia. I know that the schools of this country are free from this great evil, as are those in Switzerland, and in all democratically governed countries. It is relatively simple to keep this element out of schools: Let the teacher have as little disciplinary power as possible. Then the only source of respect for him, on the part of the students, will rest his human and intellectual qualities."

The aim of schools, he states, should not be merely to give 'dead knowledge" but "to produce individuals capable of independent action and thought, yet who feel that their greatest service in life is to the community."

English schools, Einstein believes, come nearest to "realization of this ideal."

Stresses Joy in Work.

He terms the "challenge to accomplishment" the most important element in education.

Most important incentive to accomplishment in school and in life, Einstein writes, is "joy in your work, joy in its results, and the consciousness of what those results mean for your community."

A teacher should be an artist in his profession, according to Einstein, and be allowed "a wide range of choice both in his subject matter and in his methods of teaching."

In his closing statements, the famed scientist says he is "opposed to the point of view that the school must teach the special skills that will be directly used later in life. The demands of life are far too varied to make it possible to offer any such special training."

Need of Strong G. O. P. at Polls Cited by Farley

Active Opposition Party Is Best for Nation, Leader Asserts.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, who is also Democratic national chairman, came out yesterday for a strong—but not too strong—Republican Party.

Speaking at the National Press Club, Farley declared: "The stronger the opposition, the more certain it will be that the Democratic Administration will put forth its best efforts. It is important in the interests of the people that the Republican Party be strong.

"But not too strong," he added with a smile.

"Our party will be in power as long as we give the right kind of administration," he continued. "The President has it in his power to do more good in the direction of governmental reform that has ever been done."

Tells of Irish Visit.

Farley told club members of his recent trip to Ireland and said he had kissed the Blarney Stone, but denied reports that he had "bit a piece out of it." He said he had been surprised by being presented with the coat of arms of the Farley family because he "didn't know we had a coat of arms."

The Democratic chairman praised what he termed the sportsmanship of Gov. Alf M. Landon in his "off-the-record" speech at the Gridiron Club dinner Monday night and in his Republican Presidential campaign.

Farley discussed at length his prowess as a major political prophet, pointing out that he had not only prophesied the President would carry every State except Maine and Vermont but that he had previously made similarly accurate predictions. He said he predicted Roosevelt would carry New York for governor by more than 100,000 in 1928 and that he would carry it by more than 700,000 in 1930.

Forecast Recalled.

"The day after the 1930 election I said he would be the next President," Farley asserted.

He listed a number of other accurate prophesies including the prediction the eighteenth amendment would be repealed. He said he based his latest prediction on information received from 2,000 men and women scattered throughout the country. He added the result in Vermont was considered doubtful until two or three weeks before election.

"I still think that if President Roosevelt had gone to Maine and Vermont he would have carried those States," he said.

He added that the Democrats "only went through the motions" in the Maine Presidential campaign.

"The only issue in the election was the New Deal," Farley said. "The people voted for President Roosevelt because they wanted his policies continued."

England, Japan Fighting Naval Pact Deadline

Latter Invokes Escalator to Combat Britain's Ship Salvaging.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 22.—Great Britain and Japan tonight jockeyed for naval supremacy before the world begins speeding up naval building January 1 when the 1922 Washington and 1930 London naval treaties expire.

The British decided to convert five over-age cruisers into "anti-aircraft ships."

This creation of a new type of vessel from the old was interpreted in naval quarters as new proof of the British concern over possible air attacks on the country.

Japan, in answer to Britain's move in retaining the cruisers, said it would invoke the escalator clause of the 1930 treaty to retain a corresponding tonnage of over-age submarines.

Britain's retained cruisers, which under the treaty would have had to be scrapped by December 31, total approximately 19,000 tons.

Bar Down for All.

The United States, Britain and Japan were limited to 52,700 tons of submarines each. Invocation of the escalator clause by any party automatically entitles the other parties to retain as much submarine tonnage as the invoking party.

With nine days remaining before the two treaties expire, attention was centered on the question of whether the three nations would agree to continue the Washington pact's ban on additional fortifications in the Pacific.

The Japanese note announcing the escalator clause of the 1930 treaty would be invoked for retention of 19,000 tons of submarines, gave no reply to a British request for extension of article 19 of the Washington treaty.

Under that article the United States, the British Empire and Japan agreed that the status quo with regard to fortifications and naval bases in the Pacific Ocean with a few exceptions, would be maintained.

London Treaty Relaxed.

Japan's escalator announcement carried a step further the relaxation of the bonds of the 1930 London pact.

Britain was the first to strike at the shackles when, on July 15, she invoked the escalator clause to save 40,000 tons of overage destroyers due to be scrapped by December 31.

The United States automatically was allowed to retain equivalent extra tonnage while Japan was allowed 28,133 tons.

The United States elected to keep in service 40,000 tons of destroyers it would have had to scrap, but Japan served notice she wanted to retain excess submarine tonnage instead of a full 28,133 tons of destroyers.

Britain in announcing she would convert her retained cruisers into "anti-aircraft ships" pledged that the vessels would be kept in service for only five years "of peace."

Authorities said the present six-inch guns would be replaced with lighter and more suitable anti-aircraft equipment.

Mrs. Mason Named To New ABC Term

Mrs. Agnes K. Mason, vice chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, was re-appointed by the District Commissioners yesterday to an additional four-year term on the board.

Mrs. Mason, an original member of the board, was proposed for reappointment by Commissioner George E. Allen. Her first three-year term expires February 4.

Chairman George Offutt has one more year to serve. Isaac Gans, third member of the board, was reappointed last year for a four-year term.

Jailed HuntingtonMayor Attends Hearing, Shops

Indianapolis, Dec. 22 (AP).—Mayor Clare W. H. Bangs, of Huntington, in jail since July 6 for contempt of court, enjoyed a "holiday" in Indianapolis today. He came to attend a supreme court hearing, found time to do his Christmas shopping, then went back to Huntington to spend Christmas behind the bars.

"Christmas won't be any worse to spend in jail than any other day," said the tall, broad-shouldered mayor, who went to jail because he wouldn't obey an injunction to discontinue the sale of electric power to private consumers from the Huntington municipal plant.

Humming Birds End Cuba Flight At District Zoo

Some sort of a record is believed to have been established yesterday when 30 humming birds reached the zoo after a flight all the way from Cuba.

The tiny creatures, which reached their destination safely despite the fact they have never been trained along homing lines, are now on exhibition in the bird house annex.

P. S. They flew here in two planes, a Pan-American airliner from Havana to Miami and an Eastern Air lines ship the rest of the way.

'William Tell' Shooting Proves Fatal in Texas

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 22 (AP).—A William Tell act that resulted in the fatal shooting of W. F. Emery, 15, will bring no official punishment to the boy who fired the shot, police officers said today.

They accepted the explanation of Joel Solters, 11, that he shot his hunting companion accidentally after Emery challenged:

Emery died in a hospital several hours after the bullet struck him in the head yesterday.

Movie Actress Shaken by Fight At Night Club

Eleanor Whitney Carried Away Hysterical After Blows Are Traded.

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, Dec. 22.—Eleanor Whitney, screen actress, was carried from a Hollywood night club in a hysterical condition after two men exchanged impromptu blows while notables of the screen looked on, it became known today.

The witnesses included Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor.

Guests of the club said the trouble arose three nights ago while Billy Gray, master of ceremonies, was performing a burlesque fan dance.

As he passed a table occupied by Miss Whitney, her escort, James Ellison, actor, and a party of friends, Gray was declared to have put on a bit of by-play.

Witnesses said a San Francisco man at the table, whose name was not learned, took offense and struck at Gray. Gray struck back and Ellison quieted his guest.

Gray calmed other diners by announcing the fight was part of his act.

"We rehearsed it for two weeks," he said over the loud speaker.

At the conclusion of the performance when Gray entered a cocktail lounge, the San Franciscan was declared to have rushed him again, only to be promptly floored.

Miss Whitney began screaming and one of her friends carried her to her cab. Ellison helped his friend from the place.

"It was all an unfortunate mistake for which I am terribly sorry," Ellison said. "Both Miss Whitney and myself apologized to Billy Gray and shook hands the next day."

Alcohol TaxOfficer Sent to Baltimore

The Internal Revenue Bureau's intelligence unit began the investigation of the Baltimore office two months ago. The inquiry is being directed by Elmer Irey.

240-Year Sentence Faced by Brunette

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Brought here under heavy guard from the Lewisburg (Pa.) Penitentiary where he was starting to serve a life sentence for kidnaping, Harry Brunette, 34, Midwest desperado, was indicted by the Federal grand jury today on 24 additional counts carrying a possible penalty of 240 years.

Brunette, who was captured in New York last Tuesday after a dramatic gun battle with G-men led by J. Edgar Hoover, would have been eligible for parole after 15 years of life sentence. The grand jury indicted Brunette on 12 new counts, using a Federal officer for each count, for unlawful assault with an illegal weapon, and on 12 more charges for "opposing, impeding and intimidating Federal officers in pursuit of their duties."

Brown Upholds Aide in Battle On Liquor Shop

Capt. Morgan Opposed to Granting Permit for Southeast Grocer.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, yesterday joined Capt. Joseph E. Morgan, of the Fifth Precince, in opposing granting of a liquor license to a grocer in Southeast Washington.

Maj. Brown, who ordered a special investigation of Capt. Morgan's opposition after receiving a call from the office of Representative the Eighth Precinct, was bitten on House District Committee, said he believed the precinct commander's stand was well taken.

Capt. Morgan emphatically denied he had been subjected to any form of political pressure after he stated his opposition.

"No one had even suggested that I change my mind for any reason at all," Capt. Morgan said.

Mrs. Agnes Mason, vice chairman of the District Alcohol Beverage Control Board, which has the case under consideration, said the application will be rejected if police recommend that action.

Disquieting Sequel.

"In expressing our faith of the Western World," said President Roosevelt at Buenos Aires on December 1, "let us affirm that we maintain and defend the democratic form of constitutional representative government."

His speech was warmly applauded by the representatives of the 21 republics assembled in the Argentine capital to write a new Pan-American charter of peace. But it is clear that the spirit of the President's fine speech was lost on some of the nations whose envoys gave lip service to its democratic ideals.

In more than one Latin-American nation, at the very moment Mr. Roosevelt was voicing his faith in free government as an instrument of peace and justice, Fascist or quasi-Fascist governments held power. Since then the frail plant of constitutionalism in Cuba has begun to wither under the hot blasts of militaristic ambitions.

In this connection it makes little difference whether President Gomez, who has opposed the army's rural education program, was justified in his stand or not. Americans, generally, will sympathize with his view that education is and should remain a function of the civil government rather than the army. But, possibly, local conditions in Cuba may offer some justification for the army's activities in providing schools in the backward districts.

There can be no question, however, that in vetoing the special sugar tax bill, passed by both houses of the Cuban Congress, President Gomez was exercising what is clearly his constitutional right. His impeachment, therefore, simply indicates that the army-dominated Cuban Congress is prepared to interpret opposition to Batista and the army as treasonable. Since Gomez has manifested such opposition steps have been taken to remove him from office.

If this does take place the very slow progress toward constitutionalism which Cuba has made since the overthrow of Machado will be destroyed. The Cuban government will then stand revealed simply as a creature of the army and its leader, Col. Batista. Such a development can hardly be to the advantage of the island republic which only recently was vouchsafed by the United States complete freedom to run its own affairs without threat of intervention by this Nation.

The Eleventh Commandment.

To attain its highest development the art of government requires a sense of humor. History is overburdened with the failures of rulers who took themselves and their policies too seriously. The United States owes not a little of its happy evolution in political matters to the fact that no policy or personage in this country is too sacred to be kidded.

It is this national characteristic which gives special significance to the semi-annual dinners of the Gridiron Club. No ordinary imagination would stretch far enough to picture Stalin and Trotsky sitting down at the same table in Soviet Russia, or Hitler and Ossietsky laughing good-naturedly at a club dinner in Berlin while newspaper men exposed them both to relentless lampooning. Yet the most distinguished leaders in American politics, business, labor and finance willingly submit to this ordeal—and appear to enjoy it.

The very fact that President Roosevelt, Gov. Landon, Norman Thomas and Earl Browder assembled at a single function to see and hear themselves ridiculed symbolizes attainment of a high degree of representative government. So long as the leaders of rival factions are thus willing to see themselves as others see them, there is little need to fear for the future of popular government in this country. For with this sense of proportion, the triumph of victory and the tragedy of defeat easily fuse into a common desire to co-operate for the national welfare.

Gridiron dinners have become famous because they so effectively and impartially satirize the drama of national events. But they are by no means unique in this respect. On the stage, in contemporary literature, in the magazines and newspapers, grave national problems that elsewhere might be the subject of thunderous pronouncements are frequently lightened by the touch of good-natured banter. When our next inventory of national assets is taken more weight might well be given to the widespread observance of that eleventh commandment which is said to read: "Thou shalt not take thyself too damn seriously."

At The Militant Stage.

Samuel Gompers believed that "until there is acceptance of mutual rights, the labor movement is of necessity a militant movement." That penetrating observation affords a major clew to the origins of the numerous labor disturbances which now threaten to disrupt, or have already interfered with, operations in many of our great industrial plants.

There is abundant evidence to show that we are still in the militant stage of the campaign to establish a representative and effective form of collective bargaining. Such backwardness seems strange, perhaps, in a highly industrialized country like the United States, with trade unions long established in certain lines of activity.

The slow progress of the labor movement, especially its failure to organize the mass production industries, has to some extent been due to the shortcomings of labor leaders who did not adapt their methods to new requirements. However, the lack of organizing enterprise does not explain why our industrialists have offered such a determined and heretofore effective opposition to trade-unionism, particularly in many of the basic industries. Trade unions, in co-operation with employers, have long played an important part as responsible regulatory agencies in Great Britain. Why have they had less success in the United States?

The difference is partly due to the fact that we are not as far removed from the pioneer stages of industry as are the British. The ideals of independence and the unbending individualism of a simpler economic age are still fresh in memory and still set standards for the guidance of industrial leaders in a new era. In addition, organized labor in this country has frequently tolerated activities by its adherents which arouse the resentment of all fair-minded people. A case in point is seemingly provided by the recent inexcusable outbursts of vandalism against local barbers who refuse to observe union hours and price scales.

An increase in strikes and lockouts is a characteristic accompaniment of rising business activity, after prolonged periods of depression. But the disturbances growing out of present-day efforts to organize the mass production industries spring from a deeper cause. They are manifestations of that evolutionary process which is steadily carrying organized labor along the road toward emancipation from old industrial relationships. The movement has been hastened by the experience gained in giving effect to collective bargaining agreements under NRA, but it would have come in any event sooner or later.

The struggle over the company union, denounced on the one hand as a sham and a farce and extolled, on the other hand, as an ideal collective bargaining agency, may obstruct but is not likely indefinitely to retard a type of independent industrial unionism, divorced from employer control. While the company union may, in theory, be truly representative of the workers, it is significant that the majority, given a free choice, prefers to make the industry or the craft rather than the individual plant the basis for organization. It is equally arresting to find industrialists, formerly opposed to unions of any kind, embracing the company union as the lesser of two evils.

Mutual hostility and suspicion create the impression that labor unions are irresponsible agencies organized to obtain all they can extort, regardless of the effect upon industry. If the constructive contribution which trade unions can make to regulation of industry were better understood and emphasized, there would be less stubborn employer opposition to inevitable economic developments. And there would also be a less militant spirit abroad, inciting labor to make unreasonable demands and to use arbitrary tactics in attempting to enforce them.

What Every Woman Knows.

Two years ago Mrs. D. H. Lawrence, a stolid, patient German woman, cried out to the world in general and to one woman in particular, "Try it then yourself, living with a genius, see what it is like." This week there died in Princeton, N. J., a countrywoman of hers who also might well have written a book around the old, old theme which Barrie immortalized. But Elsa Einstein preferred to keep counsel only with the household gods who watched over her home and with the genius to whom she was wed in 1916. Today the magnitude of his loss emphasizes that common humanity which makes us all akin.

Being married to men whose theories escape the compass of average minds is not the only basis of comparison between Frieda Lawrence and Elsa Einstein. Both had been unhappily married, both had borne children by their former marriage, both left their native land to follow their husband's wanderings over the globe, and both must often have felt that they were living in a goldfish bowl. Lawrence's obsession with what he termed the "Fantasia of the Unconscious" set him apart and sorely tried the loyalty of his friends. And Einstein, pioneering in that empyrean where mathematics and philosophy merge, must also have appeared, even to his wife, to dwell in another world.

Mrs. Einstein, like Mrs. Lawrence, agreed that, "It is not ideal to be the wife of a genius." That she succeeded so admirably not only in fitting her life to his but in adapting his mode of living to her charming and hospitable nature as well, lends deeper emphasis to "what every woman knows."

Toward Credit Control.

The Administration's move to sterilize gold imports does not of itself solve the problem of excess reserves and is not, therefore, a guarantee against future credit inflation. By keeping new gold from other countries out of the domestic credit pool, however, the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Board may prevent the situation from being unnecessarily aggravated. And, what is more important, this action indicates that the Administration will be ready to take more drastic steps as the need arises.

Under normal pre-war conditions gold was shipped to settle international balances resulting from the exchange of goods and services. But the current flow of gold into the United States represents primarily capital movements. In part it is being driven out of European countries by threats of war, and in part it is being attracted here by the prospects of profitable investment in American industry. The country, however, is chiefly interested in this influx from the viewpoint of its bearing on an uncontrollable credit expansion.

The plan adopted is simple. In essence it provides that the Treasury shall not merely buy all imported and domestic gold but shall hoard it until the metal is once more in active demand. Under this arrangement gold may flow in or out without disturbing the domestic credit base. Such control is not only desirable; it is imperative if grave risks of currency instability are to be avoided.

In effect, however, the Treasury and Federal Reserve Board have merely said that they will not permit inflationary tendencies to be reinforced by additional gold. But gold has been flowing into this country for several years. Nearly $4,000,000,000 has been received since the gold purchase act was passed early in 1934. Excess reserves in the banks, available for creation of an enormous volume of credit, stand at approximately $2,300,000,000, in spite of the heavy monetary demands of the Christmas season. Obviously these excess reserves constitute a problem not solved by making new acquisitions "inactive."

There are indications that the sterilization of imported and newly-mined gold is only one of several steps contemplated by the Administration. The whole problem of excess reserves is to be again considered by the Federal Reserve Board in January. It is clear that the Administration must be prepared to cope with inflationary dangers with the utmost vigor. And it is also clear that so long as the Federal budget remains unbalanced the Government will be under a severe handicap in any such undertaking.

The major trench to be taken in the fight against inflation is unquestionably that of the unbalanced budget. With its own finances is order, the Government will be in a position to clamp effective restrictions upon any incipient runaway credit boom. But so long as the Government itself has continually to go into the market and borrow money for its routine operations it will promote rather than retard inflationary forces. It scarcely need be said that the country expects the Administration to face this larger problem in a realistic way, aside from the policy that has been adopted to immunize dangers inherent in the present flow of gold.

It Should Be Repealed.

It is encouraging to note the growing probability that very soon after Congress convenes it will have opportunity to remove the vicious and inexcusable "red rider" from the statute books.

Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, of Maryland, has already drafted a measure calling for the outright repeal of the objectionable rider to the 1936 District appropriations act. In view of this, Chairman Mary T. Norton of the House District Committee has wisely decided to abandon her plan to seek modification of its wording.

Obviously no good can come of compromising with so ill-conceived and dangerous a measure. There is no half-way house in legislative attempts to dictate what shall and what shall not be taught in the public schools. If the schools are to exercise their proper function, they must be released from all such external restraints. In other words they must be returned to the educational profession, whose patriotism and Americanism only the professional red baiters have had the effrontery to impugn.

The quicker and the more completely the "red rider" is eliminated, the better. The healthiest kind of legislative action which the incoming Congress can perform, so far as the District school situation is concerned, is to make no concessions whatever to this discredited manifestation of Blantonism.

Pan-Arabism.

Albert Viton In Asia.

Nobody can foretell into what political form Pan-Arabism will crystallize. A United States of Arabia on the American pattern may be the result or a loose federation of autonomous states having joint consular representatives; a Zollverein or a strongly centralized state. And nobody can foretell, for that matter, when it will crystallize. For, however anxious Arabs are to disregard the fact, Europe is still here. I only know that during a dinner in an Arab home some months ago one proposed a toast to "United Arabia in 25 years" and everybody jumped at him. "No, no," a chorus of voices thundered, "we will have it in five years." Maybe. The important thing is that the force making for unity exists and is growing not weaker but stronger.

Thirty-Hour Week.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If hours of labor are controlled by law and made flexible so there is never but a minimum of labor shortage or labor surplus, then there should be neither over-production nor under-production.

Consider the following example: We have ten men working 60 hours a week each and making 40 dollars each. We also have ten men sitting on a bench idle waiting for jobs. The men working realize there are men unemployed looking for their jobs and through fear of being thrown out of work they are spending as little as possible of their earnings (naturally production is low as it has to meet only a limited demand from ten men) and are saving all they can of said earnings.

Then we pass a law decreasing the labor hours of the 10 men to 30 hours a week each, thereby putting the other ten men to work. What happens? Production increases because it has to meet the demand of 20 men to the limit of their earning capacity.

Therefore work for all means more buying power which in turn means more production.

This law will involve no impairment of liberty. No man can be said to be free who is denied work as a means to make a living and no country can be called a free country which denies men honest labor. Of what good is liberty to a man who is denied work? Such liberty is only sham.

If all men are equal under the law then it must follow that it is only through the law we can have equality, liberty and security.

Social Security.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps the full import of the significance of the social security act, which has been characterized by economists of note as the most sweeping welfare measure ever enacted, is not sufficiently appreciated by the general public. Partisan criticism tended to confuse, rather than clarify, the issue.

Government employees, as is well known, are recipients of benefits of this nature now being applied to wage earners in private industry. States and municipalities have provided similar protection for their employees, and the inclusion of all wage earners in industry under such provisions is a milestone in progressive action and social betterment. Future historians will unquestionably regard this step as having been inevitable and, while pondering the matter, will express wonderment that there could have been adverse comment on it.

Anything promotive of, or contributing to, a beneficial purpose must inevitably have the endorsement and the enthusiastic response of those concerned with the general welfare.

By way of analogy: the compensation laws, now in effect in all but two States, compensate the workman for wage loss when he is injured and provide for medical treatment. Under these laws, the employer provides insurance for his workers against accident hazards. Under the social security act the employe is insured against what the depression thught was a greater hazard—the hazard of unemployment.

Two Unfortunate Girls.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I should like to personally thank you for your willingness to help, through your columns, some of those so direly in need. Especially in mind are the two outstanding cases of those unfortunate girls, Miss Fenwick and Edith Maxwell.

The case of Miss Maxwell is such a gross injustice that it seems to belong to the Middle Ages, where cruelty and revenge displaces fairness, and judgment based on evidence.

Surely such injustice does not belong to a country where laws are made to defend such as Miss Maxwell from ignorance and hate. I so trust that through your paper, public opinion may be aroused and the girl freed from her predicament. She is certainly being victimized.

Teachers And Communism.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If we are going to fight Communists and communistic propaganda, as we should, then let us fight them! If communistic propaganda is being circulated through our schools in the guise of textbooks or study magazines, then let us take it out and destroy it! If any member of the school board, or any official or employe of the school system is a Communist or responsible for the spread of communistic propaganda in the schools, then let us fire such person! But let us, once and for all, cease, by repeal of the red rider, this continued un-American and unsportsmanlike attack which the red rider and its ancillary procedure forces us to make upon the one group of Americans in whom we should have the most confidence because their position makes it possible for them to be our most effective allies in the crusade against communism.

When a soldier enters the field of battle with orders to fight he does not turn his guns upon his own comrades in arms, but seeks the enemy and aims his fire upon the enemy. Let us in this battle against communism do likewise. If we seek the co-operation of the teacher instead of attacking him or her in this fight, our task will be made lighter and our goal will be attained more quickly.

Opera House Here?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Another harbinger of prosperity has just arrived in New York, for the Metropolitan Opera Co. is entering upon a new season with checks pouring into the box office and long queues forming outside the ancient opera house. "The demand for tickets was greater than it has been in any year since 1929, and many who were unable to buy seats for the opening night took tickets for performances later in the week," according to the New York Times.

Unless those of us living here can afford a trip to Gotham to hear perhaps one or two operas during the winter, many music-lovers domiciled in the Nation's capital are denied the aesthetic and social values of the lyric drama. Buenos Aires has its Teatro Colon, Rio its Theatro Municipal and Mexico City as fine an opera house as Dictator Diaz could build; but of all the great capitals of the New World, Washington, the place par excellence in the United States for such a theater, remains silent.

A movement is under way to erect a monument or auditorium at public expense in honor of Thomas Jefferson. I suggest that the Nation be polled on the question of using the money to erect a temple of music—this would indeed be a fitting tribute to the sage of Monticello.

Drowning Cry.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Help! Help! Somebody. We young people are drowning in the sea of romance, while the older woman walks off with the prize-winning life savers.

Three times this year the woman of 40 has made us take back seats. First came Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen's marriage to the Danish officer. Then the announcement of Mary Pickford's engagement to young and famous Buddy Rogers. We braved those two storms.

Now comes the news of the greatest of all prizes. A king has cried out his love for another one of the forties. I am 24 and have been engaged for over a year. Last night my fiance came around to break the engagement, saying I wasn't old enough to make a good wife, and that he preferred a woman around 40. DEFEATED.

Street Car Tie-Up.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A column in The Post of December 18 had the following heading: "Riders Register Less Criticism on Bus Service." If the reason that causes at least nine-tenths of all the dissatisfaction regarding street car service, namely, the tracks being jammed with automobiles, was removed, do you think that there would be less criticism of bus than street car?

I believe there are thousands and thousands of people that would find the street car service much more satisfactory than bus service if automobiles were not permitted on the tracks. Why should they any more than pedestrians? The space allotted to street car tracks is very small compared to the space over which automobiles can run, even on the streets with car tracks, not to speak of the number of streets without car tracks at all. But, when one considers that the people who ride street cars never make laws, it is easy to understand why the street cars are never considered in the traffic regulations or even given a square deal.

It is also easy to understand why, of all the arguments and criticisms ever written in the newspapers regarding the traffic conditions, nothing is ever mentioned about the cause of most of the trouble, as of course editors and newspaper managers never have to ride street cars either. Or, if anything has ever been published about automobiles blocking the street car lines, I have never seen or heard of any such article. Why not at least be fair to the street car service and publish the real reasons for slowing up or preventing sometimes, almost entirely, the street cars to move at all?

FANNIE M. DUNN.

G. O. P.'s Future.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the defeat of the Republican Party many of our voters are finding fault with the leaders of our party. This criticism to me seems unfair and very ungrateful. Mr. Hamilton, our chairman, worked hard for the success of our national ticket, while Gov. Landon made a wonderful fight. It is a consolation to know that our Grand Old Party fought a brave battle, even though it was defeated. Let us take our defeat cheerfully and look with hope and courage to the future. We are sure to find another Moses who will lead us out of our political wilderness.

The Republican Party will win again some day. A political party that saved the Union and abolished slavery cannot be kept down. Let us take fresh courage and begin to organize and build up our party for the 1940 Presidential campaign. To do this we will need the help of all the elements in the Republican Party. We must not drive anyone away from the party, but cultivate a social spirit toward all. The Republican Party is at the crossroads, and it must decide which way it will go. It must begin at the bottom and build a new national spirit if it hopes to win the 1940 Presidential election.

In this day of vast changes, new inventions and fast travel, no political party can make progress that clings to the dusty legends and traditions of the past. It must put on a new dress of progressiveness and march forward to the front.

Mussolini's Policy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After having quoted Mussolini's four points of the treaty with the Soviet government of September 2, 1933, Mr. Anthony Lane asks why Mussolini has changed his mind and has aligned himself with Hitler, Japan, Franco, etc. To the anti-Fascist the answer is easy. It is the one that we have always made. Mussolini and fascism have no principles of social justice. They don't want any individual or collective rights for the people because their existence is based and can live only on falsehood and force, notwithstanding the hypocritical denial of its representatives over there or here.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

The Salesgirl's Visit From St. Nicholas.

(Reprinted by Request.)

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the flat
Not a creature was stirrin' (include me in that);
My stockin's, a little the worse for wear,
Was hung on the back of a three-legged chair;
Outside snow was fallin' in beautiful flakes,
But I didn't care—I was too full of aches;
I'd worked in a store through the holiday strife,
And was plannin' to sleep for the rest of my life,
When up from the airshaft there came such a clatter
I leaped out of bed to see what was the matter;
(I thought at the time 'twas a nut down one flight,
Who starts up his radio late ev'ry night);
So I went to the window and loudly did cry,
"Is this Christmas Eve or the Fourth of July?"
When what to my dead-with-sleep eyes did appear
But a hinky-dink sleigh and eight tiny reindeer!
And who should be drivin' right up in the door
But one of them masquerade guys from the store?

* * * *

I said to myself, "What can be this guy's game?"
When he clucked to his reindeer and called 'em by name;
"Now Dasher! Now Dancer! Now Prancer! Now Vixen!
On Comet! On Cupid, On Donder and Blitzen!"
Well, I'd never observed these fresh store-actors much;
I had thought they was Greeks, but this feller talked Dutch;
An' just as I'm dopin' what next he will do,
Right up to the housetop the whole outfit flew!
And then in a twinklin' I heard on the roof
The prancin' and pawin' of meat on the hoof;
(Just imagine my feelin's with sleep nearly dead
And some sap with an animal act overhead!)

* * * *

As I drew in my bean and was turnin' around,
Down the chimney my visitor came with a bound.
A big bag of junk he displayed with a grin,
And he acted to me like he'd like to move in.
The stump of a pipe graced his jaw as he spoke,
And asked, "Gotta match? Do you mind if I smoke?"
He had a broad face and a (pardon me) belly,
That shook when he laughed like a dish full of jelly;
He was chubby, good natured and oozin' with glee,
But I ask you, dear reader, what was it to me?
The point that I make is 'twas then 2 o'clock,
And a man in my room without stoppin' to knock!
I was thinkin' how noivy he was and how slick
When he says to me, "Lady, I'm only St. Nick."

Well, a poor tired store slave in no mood for fun,
I gave him a look and I asked him, "WHICH ONE?"
He spoke not a word but went on with his work,
And filled up my stockin's then turned with a jerk,
And layin' a finger aside his red nose,
And, givin' a nod, up the airshaft he rose . . .
He sprang to his sleigh with a shake of his head
And I pulled the shades down and fell into bed.

* * * *

"Merry Christmas!" he called as away his deers flew,
And I just gave a yawn and I answers, "SEZ WHO?"

Not Boondoggling.

A highly useful variety of work-relief in drouth States will soon be launched by the WPA, in collaboration with the Bureau of Biological Survey. About 4,000 needy farmers are to receive employment in restoring and improving wild-life refuges in nine States. A fund of $600,000 is available for the 51 projects.

The work is designed to undo some of the neglect and destruction of past years. Drainage has depleted water supplies in regions once filled with game. Erosion has gone unchecked and destroyed natural cover. As an instance of what this has meant economically, the Government cites the fur industry of North Dakota, ruined by drainage and drouth, which in former times brought a cash income of $2,000,000 annually to trappers.

These are projects with the dual purpose of supplying wages where they are most needed and bringing permanent benefits. No boondoggling enters here; these are truly useful public works.

A Mid-Week Review of Current Publications

A Liberal in Silks

By Alexandra Brown

THE memoirs of Malwida von Meysenburg, translated from the German by the writer's great-niece and compressed from three volumes into one of 310 pages, are well known in Germany. In 1927 the forty-third edition was brought out, but their republication has been forbidden in Nazi Germany for the reason that the writer's whole life consisted of a perpetual series of struggles against the intangible and invisible barriers to freedom of thought and action.

The book may be divided into two parts, her life in Germany and her life as a political exile.

Born in 1816, the daughter of the Prime Minister of the Electorate of Hesse and one of 11 children, her early description of life in a small German court and of her own family life, while somewhat jerkily written, is vivid and very charming. Her first feelings against the traditions of her immediate entourage comes at an early age, when she first partook of Holy Communion. She had prepared for it ardently and expected "to see the mystery of the cross, the life in death, in the light of heavenly glory for me. I touched the chalice with my lips; a voice said to me, 'This is my blood which was shed for the forgiveness of many.' I felt no inner change, no mystery was revealed to me. * * * Gradually I stopped going to church at all."

• • • •

THE development of her thoughts along extremely liberal lines in political religions and social problems was attributed by her family to the influence exercised over her by a young cleric who later left the church to become editor of a revolutionary paper, whom she loved with all her customary vigor and whom she pursued unmercifully. While he appeared to have loved her in a lackadaisical fashion at first, she was unsuccessful, in spite of her efforts, or possibly because of them, in holding his love. As he so cruelly put it in a letter which she herself quotes: "If you had been more of a coquette, you would have made a better use of the situation and would have won out."

She became more and more associated with revolutionary organizations and well known rebels after this, much to the distress of her conservative family. At this time she was very active in a college in Hamburg, founded to give women the necessary education to achieve economic freedom but which was finally closed down. It was while she was here that she knowingly sacrificed a comfortable state pension by refusing to swear that she belonged to the Christian Church. Finally, after having a run-in with the police in Berlin, she had to flee the country.

• • • •

IN England her life, while dreary at the beginning, was much fuller. She was a personage in the circle of rebels from all over Europe who were then gathered in England as their one haven of refuge. At first she gave lessons, then later went into the household of Alexander Herzen, the great Russian revolutionary, to take charge of the education of his motherless children and the managing of his house. There she led a life of intense intellectual activity and met some of the most interesting people of the time. Mazzini, Garibaldi and other less well-known French, German and Russian revolutionaries were numbered among her intimates. There she also met Wagner, though they were not to become close friends until later, when she was living in Paris. She suffered greatly when, due to some cabal, she was forced to leave the Herzen household, as she had loved the children as though they were her own.

• • • •

ON the whole, the book is a disappointment to anyone who had hoped to acquire painlessly the history of Europe after 1815, which, somehow, one always seems to miss in school. The book is important to the average reader, however, because it gives lucidly a brief resume of the beliefs and aims of some of the leading thinkers of the time, and it presents a fine picture of the intrigues and lives of the political exiles of Europe around 1855. And it undoubtedly gives a sympathetic picture of a fine character, of a woman who was prepared to sacrifice everything to the cause of freedom. No effort was too great for her, no obstacles could deter her. This picture is softened and made human by the very frailties in her character.

One cannot blame Mme. von Meysenbug for being a little irate when her daughter tried out her theories on the maids in the house and interrupted them in their work "to give them clearer ideas, i. e., about the movement of the earth around the sun, the change of seasons, etc." At the time when a friend of hers was condemned to death for murder "a thousand plans for his rescue crossed her mind," and she did not hesitate to advocate free trade when her attention was drawn to the dangerous lives led by the coast guards who were dotted around England to prevent smuggling.

It is therefore with a pang that, after having watched her butt her head against stone walls so often, the reader comes to this passage: "For the first time, I seriously doubted the possibility of a perfect world, and I began to understand that existence itself is the evil from which we must try to redeem ourselves."

Small Packet of Poetry

"THE HEART UNBOWED," by Floy Boyer. (Henry Harrison, N. Y. C., $1.50.)

"The Heart Unbowed," by Floy Boyer, is an attractive volume both within and without. What I like about these poems is their simplicity—the lack of straining for effect, which fault is found in so much of the poetry of today.

While there is nothing great about any of this verse, it is all good and it is all entertaining. During the holiday season—and after—I see no reason why "The Heart Unbowed" should not have a ready sale. Certainly here is a pleasing gift for one person to present to another.

Strachey Tackles Socialism

By Norman Thomas,
Socialist Candidate for President in 1936.

Reviewer Finds Author's Work Is Fresh and Persuasive.

John Strachey is still, I think, outside the Communist Party. But no other writer in English so skillfully and persuasively applies the Communist version of Marxism to social problems as does this British intellectual. The book under review will probably be less popular—and is perhaps less brilliantly written—than his "Coming Struggle for

JOHN STRACHEY.

Power." It seems to me less valuable than his keen restatement of Marxian economics in "The Nature of the Capitalist Crisis." But it is a clearly written, fresh, and persuasive statement of Socialism, informed by wide general reading and a thorough knowledge of the basic writings of Marx and Engels. It is a book for the thoughtful general reader and admirably summarizes an immense range of material. (Not its least interesting section is its bibliographical appendix especially designed to introduce the reader to Marx, Engels, and Lenin.)

In parts I and II the reader finds a discussion of the failure of the profit system, the reasonableness of planning for abundance, the success of the Russian experiment, and socialist theories about the state, liberty, religion, peace, and nationalism. In part III Mr. Strachey tackles his problem from a different angle and under the head of "Socialism and the Working Class" gives so good an historical essay on the growth of working class self-consciousness, particularly in Great Britain, that one wishes he would sometime write a full length history in this field. Finally in Part IV he deals with certain of the basic Marxist doctrines under the head of "The Science of Social Change."

Now the method he employs has the defects of its virtues. It cannot be called superficial, but necessarily it is summary and tends to over-simplification. Five hundred pages make a considerable book, all that the general reader who wants to know what the author thinks socialism is about will stand in one dose. But the necessity of condensation, consciously and subconsciously, gives the author—as I know from experience—a reason, or at any rate a mighty good excuse, for omitting or skimming over certain troublesome problems on which Mr. Strachey should, and perhaps in some future book will, shed more light.

Let me illustrate, almost at random. I share Mr. Strachey's confidence in the validity of the Russian economic achievement. But I wish that he would take time to consider and answer the contention of various of the orthodox economists that as Russia finished industrializing herself and carries still farther her emancipation from the profit system of other lands, she will lose any standards of true cost accounting and any effective way to permit consumers' choice to function, and hence will fall back into a static economy with perhaps a fairly generous but arbitrary, and ultimately paralyzing, rationing of goods. There is the beginning, but only the beginning, of an answer to this in the Webbs' fine study of Russia, on which Mr. Strachey largely depends.

I do not share Mr. Strachey's complete confidence in the validity or success of Stalin's handling of problems of democracy or liberty. Most of what Mr. Strachey says is true and illuminating as far as it goes. But he ignores altogether the criticisms that competent observers have raised concerning the growth of the party bureaucracy and the threat inherent to liberty in the concentration of power in one party even after the profit system is dead.

Specifically, he is altogether silent on the immensely disquieting aftermath of the Kiroff assassination, which was answered first by wholesale executions and later by the amazing trial of Zinoviev and his companions, and the peremptory demand that Trotsky be denied all right of asylum anywhere in the world. Perhaps some of these developments came to pass after this book was written, but enough had happened to be worth discussing in a book of this sort and to make silence seem evasive.

Still more surprising is the lack of any discussion of the new Communist "line" on war, the popular front, and Communist insistence that everywhere the immediate issue is "democracy"—the very bourgeois democracy which Mr. Strachey criticizes—"against facism" rather than "socialism against capitalism." Presumably the author could and would justify the new line, including Communist tactics in our American political campaign of 1936, but how and why do not easily appear from this book.

In the more philosophical part of this book I was pleased to run across this statement: "Dialectical materialism is not, then a philosophy; it is, rather, the methodology of scientific thought." I recommend this judgment to those Marxists who try to press Marxism into a complete and unitary metaphysics.

On reading this book I am led once more as on reviewing the author's "The Nature of the Capitalist Crisis" to avow my own belief that one may be a Socialist, yes, in a legitimate sense a Marxian Socialist, and still be more of a pluralist in philosophy and in general approach to Socialism than is Mr. Strachey. One may believe that labor creates all wealth and yet find the doctrine of surplus value less economically adequate and precise, particularly in determining the final collapse of capitalism, than Mr. Strachey thinks. But to elaborate this argument in brief space is impossible, and to dwell on it would throw out of focus a review of a book in which I find so much more to praise than to attack.

It is, perhaps, enough to tell the reader that I closed the book with appreciation of its excellencies, but without conversion on the points on which I differ from the Communists, my friend John Strachey included!

"BACKWATER VOYAGE," by Archie Binns. (Reynal & Hitchcock, $1.25.)

It is seldom that a book contains a story within the story which can be printed separately and preserve its integrity, and even less often are such inner tales worth the reprinting. A happy exception is to be found in "Backwater Voyage," which originally appeared as a part of "Lightship," Archie Binns' success of some two years ago.

Two youths, Hal and Clark, buy a sixteen-foot boat with their share of some salvage money from sailing days, and work their way quietly and pleasantly up the Columbia River. They happen on a fine, old cutter anchored up a tributary creek and decide to stop there, buy the ship and plan to recondition it and go to sea, but Hal becomes impatient at the delay and goes away. Clark is in love with Virginia, however, and they marry, expecting to sail away any time. But they never do, and when Virginia dies 18 years later and Clark goes away alone, the "Galathea" is too decrepit for use.

Readers of "Lightship" will remember Archie Binns' strong writing that is so delicate and simple in first contact and so binding in the end. This is one of the best parts of the book and it has been handled handsomely in this new form. A special word should be said for the illustrations in color and black and white by Edward A. Wilson, as well as the sympathetic introduction by Lincoln Colcord.

Social Justice

"THUNDER OVER JERUSALEM," by Allen E. Cross. (Associated Press, N. Y. C., $1.)

"Poems of justice demand social action! If the objection be urged that this is to turn poetry into propaganda, it may be recalled that functional art is no less art for having a purpose." Thus the author, Allen E. Cross, justifies the theme of "Thunder Over Jerusalem."

As a book, this "Thunder Over Jerusalem" is definitely worth owning, not only for its message, but for some really great lines, as when it pictures the mountain pine, "High on some out-spur of eternity." And again we get something of the fine spirit of the author when he cries out:

"Oh, I must get away —far away from my coffin-like bunk
And my cooped steerage cabin in this ship of the world;
I must look out of any porthole
That shows me the open sea . . ."

Unwashed Realism Of Life In The Raw

"WHEN NIGHT DESCENDS," by Edgar Calmer. (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.)

It was a matter of $52.50, which scattered the three of them down the heat-choked pathways of a summer night, and left the mother, Grace Dogan, alone save for the fatal sickness which was in her, the broken thing which was the past, and the fear which was the morrow. Tom Dogan's family was on relief, and when his lottery ticket won slightly more than $50, it was a sum with which to purchase at least one night.

With the independence of the money in their pockets, they footed down the pathways of the night, and with understanding and skill the author has recorded their little odysseys, and the more bitter journeying in the mind of the bed-bound mother. Tom, tracking down the memories of a better day, ended in a moment of drunken forgetfulness before the jeering dawn, and Bud and Ray, the children, having less to forget and more to learn, came awake.

In this, his second novel, Edgar Calmer has met with admirable skill the task of advancing in parallel episodes the stories of his four characters, as they live out their one night, and of achieving in the whole a well knit unity. His transitions are uniformly graceful and the spasmed abruptness this type of story telling usually entails is fortunately absent. As the wanderers move toward their nocturnal destinies, gestures, fragments of conversation, moments in the lives of strangers, are swept into the main draught to create the panoramic illusion, and maintain and enrich the mood as skillful counterpoint.

Not recommended for those who fail to find purpose in the current disposition to portray life in what is cozily termed "the raw," it is also easily conceivable that the merits of this work will be overlooked by those professing an enthusiasm in the current cult of unwashed realism. Mr. Calmer has not the fevered, mannered style which has gone such a long way toward calling attention to many of his more famed contemporaries working this field. However, he does bring to his work a feeling for phrase and cadence, an ear critically attuned to the tempo of colloquial speech.

Observant and selective, Mr. Calmer has captured the beauty and the mystery, the squalor and the vice, the pain and the tenderness, in a word, the pulse of that life which flows up from the tenements, spreads to the green havens of Central Park, and quickens in the bright whirl of Broadway, when darkness settles on New York.

Posthumous Charges

By Thomas Atkins

THE fifth volume of Mr. Lloyd George's War Memoirs carries the story forward from the close of the unsuccessful British attacks at Passchendaele in the late autumn of 1917 to the German break through in March, 1918. There is a chapter giving an account of the abortive peace discussions with Austria in the winter of 1917-18, and another dealing with the Russian revolution and the end of the war between Russia and Germany. The theme of the last of the book is the situation on the Western Front, when the British and French armies, weakened by the costly offensive of 1917 and without the advantage of a unified command, were faced by a German army strengthened by the reinforcements which could be withdrawn from the Russian front and determined to deliver a smashing blow before the allies of Germany collapsed. The internal situation in Germany became unbearable and the arrival of the American armies made a military victory in the West impossible for the Central Powers.

Mr. Lloyd George is, of course, chiefly concerned with the British share in the struggle. The story as he tells it is one of intense national effort, of gallantry on the part of the common soldiers and of the difficult, though for the most part sound, decisions on the part of the government, but the whole marred by the faults and failures of the high military command.

• • • •

THE Passchendaele offensive, and in particular the continuation of the hopeless attacks through the mud right up to the beginning of December, is still perhaps the most damaging error laid by Mr. Lloyd George at the door of the military commanders. The appalling losses involved were a drain on British man power which could not be fully made up before the opening of the German attack in the following March, while the result achieved was to create salients which were admitted to be untenable. But apart from this, Mr. Lloyd George's other charges against the military commanders are heavy. He says that the British and French staffs were blind to, or, if they realized the situation, deliberately kept their governments in ignorance of, the approaching disruption of the Austrian Empire and of the gradual disintegration of Turkey and Bulgaria, when a timely blow, in place of the costly offensive in the West, might have worked miracles. He also contends that the British military authorities were unable to give any clear or satisfactory estimates of the reinforcements they would require in 1918, and were incapable of appreciating the other calls on British man power than that of army; that Sir Douglas Haig entirely miscalculated the losses inflicted on the German army in 1917 and the quality and strength of that army at the opening of 1918; that after the Supreme War Council had decided to set up a joint General Reserve, which would have prevented at least the worst of the misfortunes of 1918, the plan was brought to naught by the dilatory tactics of the generals and by the intrigues.

German Uhlans in Brussels.

MR. Lloyd George does not shrink from calling it a treacherous conspiracy of the opponents of the plan in London, supplied with ammunition for their purpose by the War Office; nor does he mind saying that Sir Douglas Haig entirely misjudged when the German blow would fall, and, after making unnecessary difficulties and delays about an extension of the British front, failed to give the Fifth Army, which took over the extra line, the support which was needed and which could have been given.

Mr. Lloyd George's strictures are not directed at the British High Command alone. Apart from Gen. Foch, who receives a full meed of praise, nearly all the generals mentioned are mentioned only for blame. Gen. Petain's hesitation, Gen. Pershing's delays, are dwelt upon. The mistakes of the German military commanders were even more damaging; the German staffs, just as much as the British and French, underestimated the value of the aid which the American armies could give in 1918. They miscalculated what British shipping could achieve; the faulty nature of their plans led to irretrievable disaster, "None can doubt," says Mr. Lloyd George, "that the cause of Germany's defeat lay in the usurpation of political power by the military leaders."

• • • •

THE most fundamental question and that of the greatest continuing importance raised by Mr. Lloyd George's memoirs is, in fact, the question of the proper relationship between the civil and the military authorities in time of war, a function as old as civilization. But it is one which enters on a somewhat new phase with the disappearance of the small professional army and the coming of the time when the entire resources of the state are likely to be dragged into the conflict.

Whether or not one accepts Mr. Lloyd George's presentation of the facts, his book is essential to any serious study of the War, while apart from the intense interest of the story he tells, the vigor and bitterness of his style make it entertaining, if at times rather painful, reading for the man in the street.

"WAR MEMOIRS OF DAVID LLOYD GEORGE." (Little, Brown, $4.)

Two-Dimensional Pageant

"A PAGEANT OF VICTORY," by Jeffery Farnol. (Little, Brown Co., $2.50.)

Adventure and romance are two qualities inevitably associated with the novels of Jeffery Farnol, and "As Pageant of Victory," his most recent one, contains a full measure of both. The author's long acquaintance with titled gallants, brave and beautiful women pirates and similar picturesque characters of the Old World makes it difficult for him to achieve authenticity when his scene is transferred to modern United States. Yet whatever the scene or the period, he can always be counted on to write of interesting and sometimes of thrilling adventures.

The use of the word "pageant" in the title is especially apt. The episodes unroll like pictures on a screen and the men and women are "merely players," not flesh and blood creations. It is just the book for an idle hour, to be laid aside from time to time if need be, but always to be taken up again and certainly to be read through to the end.

Three romantic periods have been selected for the story—the Revolution, the Civil War and those 13 years after the turn of the present century before the new order of life began. About the time of the battle of Bunker Hill, Anthony Falconbridge and his beautiful and mysterious wife, Blowden, left the feudal life of a Virginia plantation because Anthony was a rebel and his Charteris kinsmen were Tories. They went North in a canoe in the face of such dangers as wild Indians and roving pumas and eventually founded a family in New York. That family prospered in steel and engineering projects and became important in business and social life.

The major part of the narrative deals with the progress of the Falconbridge family. Anthony I lived through the Revolution, but was killed in a duel soon afterward. His son, Anthony II, is barely mentioned. It is his grandson, Anthony III, who is the most important character in the book. His son, Anthony IV, was killed in the Civil War, yet Anthony III lived on to take part in the winning of the West and finally to retrieve the family fortunes in the first decade of the present century. This seems like a remarkable achievement, for Anthony was about 90 at the time, but then he was a remarkable man. The reader cannot fail to be pleased that he has this final opportunity to overcome many difficulties for his grandchildren and to make his peace with his conscience for earlier errors of judgment.

Nine Colonels Made Generals In Army Shift

C. B. Hodges, Ex-Aide at White House, Named; 2 Brigadiers Promoted.

Col. Campbell B. Hodges, former White House aide, and Col. Kenyon A. Joyce, formerly commanding officer at Fort Myer, were recommended for promotion as brigadier generals by President Roosevelt yesterday.

At the same time President Roosevelt proposed two brigadier generals to be raised to the rank of major general and that seven other colonels be elevated to the rank of brigadier general. Those promoted were:

Brig. Gen. John L. De Witt, commanding the Twenty-third Infantry Brigade in the Philippine Islands, who will succeed Maj. Gen. Lytle Brown, retired.

Brig. Gen. Henry E. Knight, assistant chief of staff in charge of the personnel division at the War Department, succeeding Maj. Gen. Charles E. Bilbourne, who will be retired.

Col. Joyce, at present chief of staff of the Fourth Army stationed at San Francisco, will succeed Brig. Gen. Charles S. Lincoln, retired.

Hodges Succeeds Estes.

Col. Hodges, now stationed at Atlanta, Ga., will succeed Brig. Gen. George H. Estes, retired.

Col. George Grunert, Cavalry, stationed in the Philippine Islands, succeeds Brig. Gen. Francis LeJeune Parker, retired.

Col. Walter C. Short, Infantry, Fort Benning, Ga., succeeds Brig. Gen. Arthur S. Estes, who will be retired.

Col. Lesley J. McNair, Field Artillery, stationed at headquarters here, succeeds Gen. DeWitt.

Col Henry C. Pratt, Air Force, commanding the second wing at Langley Field, who has been serving temporarily as a Brig. Gen. was given permanent rank, succeeding Brig. Gen. Harry E. Knight.

Col. A. Owen Seaman, was appointed assistant quartermaster general with the rank of brigadier general, succeeding the late Brig. Gen. Patrick W. Guiney.

Col. Hodges was appointed a White House Aide by President Hoover and served in that capacity under President Roosevelt until June 1, 1933. Since leaving Washington, Col. Hodges has served in New York and the Panama Canal Zone. Last year he accompanied Secretary of War Dern on a tour of the Orient.

Joyce Popular Here.

Col. Joyce, one of the most popular of the commanders of Fort Myer, was assigned to that post in June, 1933, and served there until early this year. Before coming to Fort Myer, Col. Joyce had served three tours of duty in Washington.

Gen. Knight served from 1923 to 1927 in the office of chief of infantry here and returned in February, 1935, to become chief of the Military Intelligence Division. Ten months later he became assistant chief of staff.

Gen. De Witt made his Washington debut in 1910 when he was detailed to the office of the chief of staff. He returned in 1919 and became director of the supply course at the Army War College. He then served with the general staff here until 1924, when he went to Fort Sam Houston. He was assistant commandant at the Army War College until February, 1930, when he became Quartermaster General. He left Washington for the Philippines in May, 1935.

Philadelphia, Dec. 22 (AP).—Mayor S. Davis Wilson ordered the arrest tonight of Abraham Samson, lessee of a three-story brick tenement building which collapsed Saturday night, killing six persons and injuring more than a dozen others.

Parker Sentenced To Life in Murder

Donald Parker, diminutive last surviving member of the Black Dillinger gang, colored trio that terrorized southern Maryland, was sentenced to serve life imprisonment in the Maryland Penitentiary yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md. Parker was convicted last week of the fatal shooting of Horace D. Waters, Old Germantown, Md., storekeeper, five years ago.

Chief Judge Hammond Urner announced that he believed the convicted man should be hanged, but the two associate judges, Charles W. Woodward and Arthur D. Willard, contended that he should be given a life sentence because he had been convicted chiefly on the evidence of convicts and a young girl who had remembered his face for five years as the man who asked directions from her the day of the shooting.

Parker already is serving a life sentence in the Maryland Penitentiary for the slaying of a Prince Georges County storekeeper at Priests Bridge. Parker's two companions in the shooting were hanged, but his sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Gov. Nice.

Germany May Join In Locarno Treaty

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Dec. 22.—Diplomats took new hope tonight that Germany would co-operate in negotiating a new Locarno Pact, defining and guaranteeing the borders of western Europe.

Their renewed confidence was based on a report that German Ambassador Joachim von Ribbentrop had told Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden that the Reich would negotiate if the terms of the Franco-Russian alliance—which the Reich believes is aimed at Germany—were modified.

Taken to a hospital, badly burned, she sobbed, "I'm sorry, daddy. I didn't mean to be bad."

Her father, Leo Boyle, said Mary Ann had "scolded him a few days ago about the incinerator and told him if it was not cleared out Santa Claus would be unable to get down the chimney.

Her dress ignited yesterday when she tried to burn papers so they would not be dumped "in Santa's incinerator."

Jurors Clear 'Numbers' Man In Gun Slaying

Inquiry Shows Shooting Followed Altercation At Boxing Matches.

Harvey James, colored, said by the police to be a "numbers" writer, was acquitted by a coroner's jury yesterday when they returned a verdict of "justifiable homicide" after an inquest into the shooting of Gorman Wright, colored racketeer.

Wright was killed in an apartment at 1625 Twelfth street northwest last week when James is alleged, to have fired a shot at him and at Victor ("Toots") Juliano, well-known police character, who accompanied Wright.

Investigation of the shooting by Detective Sergt. John Wise, of the homicide squad, who testified at the inquest, disclosed that Wright and James had an altercation while attending the fights at Turner's Arena December 14. James, Wise said, was struck by Wright as he was leaving after the boxing matches.

Wise said his investigation showed Wright, Juliano and Roger Simkins and Albert Vincent, colored, went "looking for James," and Wright again struck James when he was in the apartment. When he did, James pulled a gun and fired. Juliano was shot in the shoulder while fleeing the apartment.

On Sunday five residents of the apartment were arrested by Federal agents in a narcotic raid. Three were charged with violating the Harrison narcotic act. They were taken from the District Jail to tell their story at the inquest.

Carter, Special Deputy Commissioner Eldon P. King and Deputy Commissioners Charles T. Russell, George J. Schoeneman, B. Spencer Bliss and Stewart Berkshire.

Social Leader Shot By Crazed Retainer

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Dec. 22 (AP). Socially prominent Mrs. J. M. Raynolds and W. E. Gay, a 60-year-old handyman, were critically wounded today in an exchange of shots in her living room.

District Attorney Owen Marron said Gay dashed into the room and shot the woman before her family could interfere.

As Raynolds grappled with his wife's assailant, Marron said, Kate, the youngest daughter, rushed to a closet and returned with a pistol. Her mother grabbed it from her, the girl told Marron, placed it against Gay's temple and fired. The prosecutor said Gay had been drinking and "apparently was a victim of hallucinations."

Walter Bruce Howe, secretary of the board of directors of the National Symphony Orchestra Association, returning from the national conference of symphony orchestra managers in St. Louis, reported yesterday the 13 leading orchestras in the country operated on a total budget last year of $4,346,500. None of the orchestras is self-sustaining it was reported at the conference.

The managers estimated that, exclusive of summer seasons and radio broadcasts, more than 3,000,000 persons heard their 1,100 musicians in 1,200 concerts during the year.

District Denies Slaughterers Are Unlicensed

Plants Are Inspected Daily, Dr. Ashworth Asserts, in Reply to Suit.

District health authorities yesterday denied charges by Adolf Gobel, Inc., slaughter house concern, that eight local slaughter houses are operating without licenses or supervision.

In a $150,000 damage suit against the District Commissioners, the Gobel company, seeking permission to establish an abattoir on Benning road northeast, cited the eight meat plants as partial basis of the court action.

Dr. R. R. Ashworth, chief of the District food, meat and milk inspection service, described the charges as "unfounded." Present local slaughter houses, he said, are operating under District licenses and Government supervision.

"However, they could not be considered abattoirs," Dr. Ashworth said. "They are run on a small scale and no livestock is killed. They deal mainly in calves and lambs.

"Each plant is inspected by inspectors of the District Health Department. They are licensed through the District after health requirements are met. Two of these houses are under Federal supervision."

The plants, Dr. Ashworth said, are operating in various sections of the city.

Commissioners Extend Holiday In Montgomery

Board Votes to Commence Christmas Vacation at Noon Tomorrow.

Montgomery County employes, except policemen, will start Christmas holidays tomorrow at noon and remain away until Monday morning, the county commissioners voted yesterday at their meeting in Rockville. The New Year's holiday will begin Thursday evening and continue until Monday after New Year's. County police will work their usual 10 and 14-hour shifts.

The commissioners appointed Hiram Musgrove, of the Bethesda Volunteer Fire Department, a forest warden on recommendation of C. F. Winslow, district forester. Bids were ordered for paving an alley in rear of the new Silver Spring Postoffice Building from Oak avenue to Harden street.

Three petitions asking that the 12-acre tract adjacent to the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Senior High School in Bethesda be drained and graded for use as a playground and athletic field for the children of Chevy Chase and Bethesda. The petitions were from the Chevy Chase Woman's Club, the Bethesda Community Garden Club and the Parent-Teacher Association of the school.

A petition for rezoning of blocks 15 and 16 in the proposed Woodside Forest subdivision from residential "A" to commercial "D" was received from Jacob S. Gruver. The lots are on Georgia avenue near Montgomery Hills commercial development. A hearing will be held February 1 at 7 p. m. in the Silver Spring County Building.

County Policeman E. L. Thompson yesterday arrested Alfred Penn, colored, 19, jumper for a Washington department store truck, on charges of larceny of a watch from the residence of Mrs. Merrill G. Murray, 6607 Delfield street, Chevy Chase. The watch was the property of a colored maid, Mary Pair, and is alleged to have been taken while Penn was collecting a return package for his employers.

The Montgomery County Council of American Legion posts urged adequate salaries for county policemen, many of whom are veterans, in a resolution adopted at its meeting in the Kensington Armory. The resolution was presented by Lawrence Smoot, chairman of the executive committee, who pointed out that the members of the police department have been the first to respond in all charitable endeavors of the legion posts of the county. The council represents the seven American Legion posts in the county.

The council will hold annual elections January 8 at the Kensington Armory, at which time several recommendations for the new year presented by the executive committee will be voted on. President Eugene J. C. Rainey has requested that all member posts certify their delegates before the January 8 meeting in order that they can participate in the elections and program discussion.

W. Carroll Waters, district deputy game warden for Montgomery County, yesterday called attention to provisions of the trapping law passed at the special session of the General Assembly this year and which is now effective.

The law provides that any persons with the consent of the owner of the property where the traps are to be set may set or place steel traps not larger than Standard No. 2 size for the purposes of capturing predatory animals and birds, provided the name of the owner be placed on each trap and that the traps be visited at least once in each 24 hours.

Application for PWA funds to improve about 25 streets in Takoma Park, was approved by the Mayor John R. Adams and the town council at a meeting held at the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department hall. A preliminary report naming streets to be fixed was given by Col. A. L. Conger, chairman of the civic improvement committee. Maj. W. F. Fischer, superintendent of public works, estimated the cost to be $150,000.

The council will hold a public hearing at which residents may discuss changing the name of Maple avenue. It is suggested that the present Maple avenue between Flower and Erie avenues be changed while Maple avenue to Kennebec remain the same.

The Hillcrest division bounded by Carroll, Park and Denwood avenues rezoning from Residential "A" to Residential "B" upon the request of A. W. Alderman, was approved.

A public hearing will be given 15 persons who signed a petition requesting the rezoning of Flower, Kennebec, Albermarle and Erie avenues from residential "A" to residential "B". Residents of Hodges lane were granted permission to plant Maple trees in the parking in front of their properties.

Rezoning of Flower, Kennebec, Roanoke and Houston avenues to permit establishing two family homes was asked in a petition filed by Theodore Raines, 702 Flower avenue.

Harrison Davis, president of the Diamond Cab Co., requested a more adequate taxi stand at Carroll and Laurel avenues. Residents of Maple and Erie avenues asked for immediate improvement of their sidewalks and streets.

A Christmas entertainment will be held in the Methodist Episcopal Church at Oakdale Sunday at 8 p. m.

Cardenas Reassures Investors; Reaffirms Mexico Farm Policy

Nation Plans to Better Estate of Peons, Says President; Foreign Capital Safe, He Avers, in Exclusive Interview; Workers Pay Tribute.

By J. P. McKnight

Copyright, 1936, by the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Dec. 22.—President Lazaro Cardenas of Mexico in an interview today reaffirmed his government's determination to help Mexico's working classes better their standard of living.

He defended his policy of expropriating and dividing great landed estates because of its "benefits to the people," but assured foreign investors they need not fear lack of guarantees in Mexico.

It was the first formal interview the Mexican executive had granted any foreign newspaperman regularly assigned to this country in the two years since he took office December 1, 1935.

While he talked to this correspondent about his problems of the past and plans for the future, hundreds of the farm workers his administration had given land, their annual convention in Mexico City just adjourned, waited outside his office to express their gratitude.

Agrarian Law Explained.

President Cardenas spoke freely and fully of the agrarian program, the new, sweeping expropriation law, Mexico's attitude toward foreign capital, the religious question, public works and government finance.

"We are trying, precisely, to aid the working class," he said, "within the limitations of the possibilities of industry, taking always into consideration necessities of capital as well as those of labor."

That aim will be furthered, the executive remarked, by the law of expropriation. Congress recently passed at his behest, which greatly broadened the government's powers to take over private property.

"There is no country," he said, "that does not have its law of expropriation."

"Naturally, every nation must have legislation to facilitate the carrying out of its program, its social program as well as its public works program."

Confidence Stressed.

Admitting provisions of the bill stirred alarm among businessmen here, President Cardenas contended this feeling had disappeared now that the law was actually on the books, and added:

"The law tends to let the government take over sources of production which are inactive. In the case of an idle (industrial) plant, the government must find the way to bring it into activity and then the government applies the law, making provision for payment (indemnity) in accordance with the law itself."

In conversation recently with United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels, the President recalled, he assured him that Mexico looked with gratitude upon persons having capital they wished to invest in the country, giving them every class of guarantees within the law.

He declare Mexican legislation governing industry "offers it more protection than that of the United States, where taxes and wages alike are higher."

Defending the Mexican government's agrarian program, particularly as it was recently applied to the rich cotton-growing Laguna section of Durango and Coahuila states, the president said the breaking up of great estates would not affect Mexico's agricultural economy.

"The greatest wealth," he said, "is that which is best distributed and results in greatest benefits to the people, so that, with the land in good hands, there is more activity to be noted than before the estates were divided up."

Pointing out that the same laws applied to Mexican and foreign interests in the Laguna as elsewhere in Mexico, President Cardenas gave assurance owners who lost their land would receive agrarian bonds guaranteed by the products of the land itself.

Long-standing bitterness between the Catholic Church and the Mexican state over laws limiting certain church activities and nationalizing church property is disappearing, he said.

"Day by day the situation improves," he asserted. "Witness Queretaro; witness Aguascalientes; witness Colima (states where closed churches recently have been permitted to reopen.)

"The conflict that existed between the groups of the several entities has been gradually dying away."

Power Firms Win Court Curb of TVA

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 22 (AP).—A decree temporarily enjoining the Tennessee Valley Authority from building new transmission lines and sub-stations not already under way or serving any new power customers except in restricted rural areas was signed here today by United State District Judge John J. Gore.

The injunction was granted 19 power companies operating in the Tennessee Valley, after a recent hearing at Nashville.

Terming the injunction "a serious blow," James Lawrence Fly, TVA solicitor, announced an appeal would be filed with the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati.

Under the injunction, the Authority is permitted to complete $3,158,932 worth of transmission lines and sub-stations now under construction, but they cannot be used to serve customers not already receiving TVA power.

This provision, Fly explained, prevents the city of Memphis from getting TVA electricity.

Dodge Reports Building Gains To PWA Head

Wholesale Revival Noted in Public and Private Construction.

With private construction in the first 11 months of 1936 up more than 60 per cent over the same period in 1935, and public construction up 54 per cent in the same period, "a wholesale revival" in the construction industry was reported yesterday to Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes by the F. W. Dodge Corporation.

The Dodge Corporation's report to the PWA covering the works awards to the 37 States east of the Rocky Mountains, was held by PWA officials to be refutation of the theory that PWA's public construction efforts would mean a decline in independent private building.

Privately financed, construction, which has been started in the 37 Eastern States during the period noted totaled $1,223,831,600, as compared with $769,264,400 for the corresponding period in 1935, the report stated.

At the same time the volume of publicly financed construction work reported during the eleven months of 1936 in the 37 Eastern States totaled $1,251,768,700 as against $811,244,000 for the first eleven months of 1935.

For the month of November, private construction in the area totaled $119,118,300, while public jobs amounted to $89,065,900. This compared with October figures of private construction, $124,537,400 and public construction, $101,230,500.

Neither the extensive program of the PWA on the Pacific Coast, nor the heavy private building revival there is reflected in the Dodge Corporation figures.

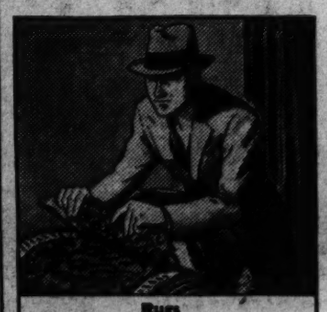
THINGS TO LOOK FOR WHEN YOU'RE BUYING . . .

Melons
Feel the blossom end. If it is soft and yielding, the melon is ripe.



Rugs
Fold an edge of the rug sharply back to back and look at the pile. It should stand up like bristles in a brush. The length of the tufts shows the depth of the pile.

Tortoise Shell
To tell the genuine tortoise shell from the imitation, rub it briskly on soft cloth until warm. If it has an odor of camphor or celluloid, it is imitation.

. . . And when buying WHISKEY look for two things on the label

1. THE TYPE OF WHISKEY . . . BLEND OR STRAIGHT
2. THE "PROOF" . . .

These statements on the label are dependable guides to the kind of whiskey you want.

Straight whiskey should be a straightforward purchase. Right on the label, the words "straight whiskey" tell you it's all whiskey, and all one whiskey. Then look on the label for one of the most important guides to getting your money's worth . . . the "proof". It's a measure of strength and, hence, of value.

Get a hundred cents of value for every dollar. Buy Old Mr. Boston 100 Proof Straight Whiskey. Get whiskey-wise with the hundreds of thousands who've made the happy discovery that this extra strength packs an extra load of golden smoothness and richer flavor. Taste the extra value in this fine 100 proof straight whiskey . . . not just the first sip but taste the lingering after-glow of full flavor, full-rounded smoothness and full strength.

Buy a bottle of Old Mr. Boston tonight. And, as you taste its full-quota flavor, delight in its round smoothness and enjoy its genial warmth, add an extra pleasure by remembering how little you paid for it.

Venue Change Urged to Insure Edith Justice

Kentucky Ex-Prosecutor Holds Fair Trial at Wise Impossible.

Kelly Kash, at one time a Commonwealth attorney in a Kentucky feud area, now a member of the Washington bar, yesterday joined with others in saying that Edith Maxwell can never hope to get justice in Wise County, Va.

Six days ago, in Wise courthouse, the young mountain school teacher was found guilty of second-degree murder and sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary.

It was her second trial, the first having resulted in a verdict of first-degree murder and a 25-year sentence. But that was set aside by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals as not justified by the evidence.

Attorney Kash pointed out that, since it was agreed that the slipper blow inflicted on the head of Trigg Maxwell, her father, could not have caused death, the burden of proof was on the prosecution to show what weapon was used to cause death. This, he insisted, the prosecution had not done.

Testimony Held Ignored.

The most dependable testimony in the trial, Kash said, was apparently ignored. This was the testimony of 13-year-old Mary Katherine, Edith's sister, who told how her father was drinking that day; how he came home late, learned that Edith was still out and said a man ought to break her neck; how when Edith did get home she heard her beg Maxwell not to "stob" her with the butcher knife, and how later she and her mother saw Maxwell holding Edith by hte "hair of the head" and forcing her down to the floor.

Mary Catherine did not see Edith hit Trigg with a slipper or any other weapon because the quarrel moved into another room.

Attorney Kash expressed the opinion it would have been next to impossible to prompt or coach a girl of such tender years.

Venue Change Urged.

Without offering any criticism of the court, he said the case should be tried in some other county or section of Virginia where a jury could be selected free from any local influences, and where the facts could be considered apart from any feeling or local prejudices.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE.

That little house in the clearing seemed like heaven to the fugitives as they sighted it around the rock walled bend. The doors of the shack were open and savory odors came from it. Someone was cooking a meal inside.

That someone came hobbling to the door as they drove into the little yard. He was a thin old man, stooped as to shoulders, and he hobbled slowly with the aid of a cane.

Cordial.

"Hey, there, stranger," he said with the delighted cordiality that people who live much alone use to the casual visitors who break their solitude. "Light, and come in and set a spell."

Doris laughed in spite of herself at the quaint cordiality of his tone.

George got out quickly, making an immediate decision. "We're in trouble, grandpa," he said. "Will you help us out?"

Perhaps it had been years since the old gentleman had been appealed to as one who could logically help anyone else. The very idea seemed to give him enormous pleasure. "Sure thing, I will," he agreed instantly. "You ain't done anything crooked, have you, son?"

"No, not crooked, but there's somebody wants to find us and we don't want to be found."

"Runnin' away?" the old man queried, chuckling.

"Well, something like that."

"Married, ain't you?"

"Yes."

"Well, then, what's eatin' you?" the old man asked. "Come right on in."

George went hastily to the back seat, lifted Patrick bodily into his arms and carried him into the shack.

A little old woman had come hurrying to the door at sound of their voices and, realizing that the dog had suffered an injury, she spread a blanket across an old cot that formed a part of the living room equipment.

Can Take It.

If Patrick had ever acted the part of a king dog he played that role now. His eyes were glazed with suffering but he made no impatient move when George's practiced hands probed his wound.

Obeying George's instructions, Doris opened his surgeon's bag and spread the equipment on a shabby table by the side of the cot. The room was meagerly furnished, even shabbily furnished, but it was spotlessly clean and the old lady had a great kettle of boiling water on the stove.

"This will hurt you, old chap," George was saying tenderly, a catch in his voice. "But you've got to take it, Patrick. You've got to get well, Pat. I've got to do the things that will help you."

Doris could have wept aloud at sight and sound of the two. In answer to the beloved voice of his master a faint gleam crossed Patrick's glazed eyes and he wagged his tail feebly.

But Doris didn't cry. There wasn't any time to cry. She only hovered close to George with the old woman and the old man, all of them trying to anticipate the slightest wish of the stern-voiced man who took command.

Try Not to Hurt.

George worked swiftly, patiently. He scrubbed his hands as carefully as he might for the most delicate operation in the most sanitary hospital, serving humans. He hastily sterilized the instruments he laid out to use.

"I won't hurt you very much, Pat," he kept saying over and over to the great dog who watched him with his patient eyes, filled with misery.

"Here, Doris, You'll have to help."

And Doris helped. She took the ether cone in hands that seemed almost as practiced as the doctor's own and she watched unswervingly while George's skillful hands laid bare the wound and probed until they found the bullet.

Thirty minutes after he had started, George rolled Patrick, still unconscious, in warm blankets that the old lady provided and Doris helped Grandma with the big heated stones, wrapped in clean rags that they tucked around the dog.

"He'll be coming out in an hour or so. I'll be back," George said.

Wants to Talk.

He hastily cleared away his surgeon's things, scrubbed up and now beckoned to the old man. "Please come. I want to talk to you."

Grandpa followed him out into the yard. "Son, I never seen anything like it," the old man said, "God surely gave you magic in your hands."

"Yes," George said, and his face was very grave.

"What worries you, son?"

"This car, if we're followed here. If someone should recognize our car."

"I got that fixed, son. There won't nobody recognize your car."

"How do you figure that, grandpa?"

"Well, come right along here with me," the old man said, hobbling ahead of George.

He led him across a short, rocky field, around another bend where, half burrowed into the cliff and half dug out, an ancient door led into a cave.

Place for Car.

"Here's my work shop," the old man said, swinging the door open. "I work out here because I don't like to mess in the house. My old lady keeps the house right clean and she don't like the smell of trapped things. I gotta work out here. Women are queer, son, you'll find that out. I reckon you ain't been married very long."

"Not long," George agreed.

"Well, wait until you been married as long as I have. Come 50 years next Fourth of July and to the same woman. I reckon I ought to know women by now, son, but I don't know 'em any more'n I did 50 years ago."

He hobbled along on his cane, clearing a space as he talked. The cave-dugout, it seemed, was used as a place to dry and cure furs. They hung around the walls in all states of preservation—beautiful, flawless skins. George estimated that several hundred dollars' worth of furs, on almost any fur market, adorned those walls.

"See, plenty of room for your car," the old man told George, "there ain't a chance in the world that if anybody comes around the shack they'll think of coming up here. Why, this old car could stay here for 50 years so far as anybody'll know."

"It can stay here forever so far as I care," George said worriedly, turning to go back to the house. The old man hobbled after and watched George swing the old door back and prop it into place.

"I'm gonna bring a rake back here," he said cannily, "and rake over these car tracks a little, specially them next to the house. If we get a little wind there won't be a chance that anybody will see that any car's been anywhere around here for years."

Doris Sick.

They met grandma hurrying out to meet them.

"Your wife's awful sick, son," she said. "After you went out she just keeled over in a corner. I didn't notice her at first. I was getting more stones to keep the dog warm and then, all of a sudden, I missed her. I looked and there was the poor little thing on the floor, just as white as death and she ain't come to yet."

George dashed ahead of the old people into the house.

Hobbling more slowly, but as quickly as they could, the older folks followed. "Poor youngsters," the old lady observed, "I feel sorry for 'em. Wonder what kind of trouble they're in? She' such a frail mite of a thing. You could just see how she braced herself to follow his orders in there. But she sure was game, wasn't she?"

"She sure was. And so was he. That was a surgeon's bag he had, notice? And he acted just like a high falutin' doctor."

"He sure did. Wonder what they've been up to?"

The old gentleman settled the question. "Well, ma, I don't know what they've been up to and somehow or other, I don't care very much. They're a pair of thoroughbreds, both of 'em. Anybody could tell it looking at them and at that dog. Ever see anything like it?"

"Wonder who that Doc is," Grandma worried. "Our Tommy would have looked like him, pa, if Tommy'd lived," the old lady said.

"Well, for the time being, ma, we'll just pretend that it's Tommy come back."

Edward Parts With Chauffeur After 18 Years

Gift Arrives From Cannes as Duke Arranges for Christmas.

By the Associated Press

Enzesfeld, Austria, Dec. 22.—Edward of Windsor parted reluctantly tonight with his chauffeur for the past 18 years, breaking another "last tie" with the England he left for love of Wallis Simpson.

The chauffeur, George Stanley Ladbrook, who drove Mrs. Simpson from England to Cannes, brought Edward's personal automobile here along with ski equipment and other baggage.

"The duke seemed more lighthearted than at any time in the last six years," Ladbrook said after he had turned over the car to an Austrian chauffeur and received his dismissal.

"He told me not to worry, said he would see I got another job and advised me to return to my wife and children for Christmas.

"I am sorry to leave him."

The duke busied himself with plans for Christmas tonight, and his first present, presumably from Mrs. Simpson, arrived from Cannes. It was a small package, heavily insured, apparently a ring or other jewelry.

The duke will be the Rothschilds' only guest at their chateau Christmas Day, Baroness Rothschild said.

Wardman Park Signs Candullo Band for Club

Hotel Plans Gala Opening Christmas Night, Gay New Year's Eve.

By Chanticleer.

The fellow whose picture is on the cover of the smash song hit, "Chapel in the Moonlight," is coming to Washington with his band. He is Joe Candullo, who has been holding forth at Radio City's Rainbow Grill. With his Merry Men, Candullo comes to the new Wardman Park night club, which opens, if everything goes off on schedule, Christmas night.

Tentative reservations are being accepted now, too, for the Wardman New Year's Eve party—based on tentative arrangements for a whopping big night, with Maestro Candullo's music, souvenirs, breakfast and the usual trappings and trimmings.

Candullo has always played the better spots and has made any number of phonograph records. And just for good measure, he played Rector's in London recently.

• • • •

Marsha Hunt, Hollywood star who recently visited here, showed a distinct partiality for "I've Got You Under My Skin" in her visits to El Patio at the Carlton, requesting Maestro Sande Williams to do it over and over. El Patio has gone a bit informal (tsk! tsk!) what with a couple members of a South American delegation recently giving a demonstration on the floor of typical South American dances!

• • • •

Don Loper and Beth Hayes, who opened the Pall Mall room at the Raleigh, have returned for an indefinite dance engagement at that spot. All new routines, with the Hayes child's blond beauty enhanced by lovely gowns designed by none other than Don Loper. They're asking them most for their "Manhattan Serenade."

The home-town atmosphere is carrying on into the Christmas season with the presentation of that all-Washington revue at La Paree. Much attention is being given back in the kitchens to what is expected to be the best Christmas Day dinner ever. Reservations are being taken now.

• • • •

Tonight sees a gala opening at the Shoreham ballroom with several big debutante parties in addition to dozens of smaller dinner parties. The debs and college seniors are home again and the debut season is in full swing. And with the opening of Congress only a week or so away the bright lights are going full blast at the Calvert street hostelry. Eddie Peabody continues to hold forth as master of ceremonies, with Carl and Leone Bonner singing. You should know that afternoon dancing will begin at the Shoreham Christmas Day. From 4:45 to 6:45.

• • • •

Warn everyone, says a note from the Ambassador, that an interesting New Year's celebration announcement is on the way from Manager Russell A. Conn. You'll recall that the Hi-Hat and Ambassador Rooms were packed to overflowing last year and Manager Conn says nothing less will be ready for patrons this year. For the moment there's special Christmas music by the Hi-Hat's artists.

They're already celebrating Christmas at Matt Windsor's Club Volga Boatman. It began last week-end and will continue through New Year's. In Russia the gay spirits and general celebration never can be limited to one day! The Boatman's revue has been changed for the period.

• • • •

The Lotus is presenting the Novelty Revue, replete with things just a little different. The little lovelies of the dancing chorus put the big climax on the show with a Rope Dance. Other highlights are three Oriental features and a comedy skit. Real musicomedy in this attraction. "The House of Morgans" adds a novelty act with Del Campo and Diane displaying their talents in the tango and rhumba. Also Victor Hyde and Val Dez and Peggy.

Ramon is again waiting to greet you at the front door of a nightery. The genial headwaiter of Connecticut avenue spots is now at Cocoanut Grove after having been in a bit of an eclipse for a few weeks. Many a pleasant acquaintance is being revived—when the Grove's customers see his beaming face.

• • • •

Al Spieldock, of Johnny Shaw's Orchestra at the Madrillon, has written five paraphrases in as many dialects for "I'm an Old Cowhand." This fellow Spieldock is to bands what Caesar was to Rome. Flash! The Madrillon is soon to have one of those Hammond electric organs. Les Colvin will handle the controls.

Jack, the cashier at Helen Hamilton's Russian Troika, likes his victuals so well that he dreamed the other night that he was in an airplane flying over a sea of borsch—with small mountains of mashed potatoes! That is one grand recommendation for the Troika's cuisine. Music by Sasha Bartnovsky.

• • • •

News is on the way from Brinkley's: Manager Jimmy Crandall promises that on New Year's Eve he will sing once again from the bandstand with Johnny Rice's swing band. Just once a year—and the time has arrived.

Should add that El Patio at the Carlton will add entertainment for the holiday period—and she is pictured on this page. Marissa Flores is her name, the genuine business in Spanish dancing and a former interpreter of Spanish and Mexican terpsichore at San Diego's Ratliff Academy.

Here and There With the Night Clubs

Marissa Flores has been added to the talent roster at the Carlton's El Patio for the holiday season. She is an interpreter of Spanish terpsichore. Right: Ramon, familiar to Washington after dark folks, is now greeting the patrons of Cocoanut Grove.

Tuberculosis Group Selects Dr. Townsend

Health Service Physician Succeeds Dr. White as President.

Dr. James G. Townsend, Public Health Service physcian and health director in the Office of Indian Affairs, unanimously was elected president of the District Tuberculosis Association yesterday at a meeting of the board of directors. He succeeds Dr. William Charles White, who resigned recently after serving for four years.

Dr. Townsend, a graduate of Central High School and of Georgetown University Medical School, has a notable record of public health work. During the World War he was in charge of extra cantonment sanitation at mobilization camps and afterward supervised examination and hospitalization of war veterans.

Later he made a study of tuberculosis in Puerto Rico, served in American consulates abroad examining aliens applying for entrance to the United States, engaged in health work in the South during the Mississippi flood and twice conducted tuberculosis studies in Alaska.

Dr. Townsend is a Fellow of the American Public Health Association and a member of the American Medical Association and of the Military Order of Foreign Wars.

Gayety Buffet Set For 5,000 Needy

Following their custom of several years' standing, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Pappas, proprietors of the Gayety Buffet, 511 Ninth street northwest, will play host and hostess to Washington's needy Christmas Day.

The cafe will be turned over for the day to serving from 1,500 to 2,000 free Christmas dinners to those in need. The doors will be open from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m.

This year's menu will consist of chicken and all the trimmings, served in traditional style.

Neighboring States Swell 'Quake Fund

San Salvador, El Salvador, Dec. 22 (AP).—Gen. Jose Trabanino, veteran relief organizer, tonight assumed charge of the task of bringing aid to San Vicente, stricken by a disastrous earthquake Saturday night.

Collection of funds and shipment of supplies for the San Vicente sufferers was pushed vigorously in El Salvador, while neighboring Central American states added their contributions. The Nicaraguan Red Cross sent a quantity of foodstuffs and medicines, and the Honduran government forwarded $4,000.

District Building Robbed.

Drafting instruments, valued at $45, were stolen from the corridor of the District Building sometime during the past week, Edward P. Brooks, superintendent of District buildings, reported to police yesterday.

On the Air Today

N. B. C. and Columbia will summarize the year's news high spots in dramatic periods as the year closes. Interestingly enough, the abdication of England's Edward is named the most outstanding event of 1936 in both polls conducted by the networks.

Columbia's hour will be presented December 29 at 11:30 p. m. (WJSV) with the ten outstanding dramatic scenes, based on the opinions of editors and publishers the country over. It will be called "Twelve Crowded Months."

The N. B. C. hour will be called "Headlines of 1936," with the selections based on Associated Press editorial opinions, December 31 at 9 (WMAL).

The lists, at least at this point, do not coincide. Here they are:

Columbia (in order of voting): Edward's abdication; re-election of President Roosevelt; Spanish war; Italy's conquest of Ethiopia; Hauptmann execution; Hitler's re-occupation of Rhineland; floods and drought of last spring and summer; death of King George V; American labor troubles; Supreme Court's AAA, NRA and TVA decisions.

N. B. C. list: British Empire crisis from death of King George V to enthronement of George VI; United States Presidential campaign and election; Spanish war; conquest of Ethiopia; civil war in labor's ranks; United States business recovery; Germany's remilitarization of Rhineland; drought and floods; Schmeling-Louis fight; kidnaping of Chiang Kai-shek.

• • • •

And still the changes in mid-winter broadcasting are being recorded. Latest is the word that "Goose Creek Parson" will leave the airways January 4 to be replaced by "Myrt and Marge." The "Goose Creek Parson" script show came out of the West, where it had established itself as quite a favorite. Apparently it didn't register so well with the network audience. "Myrt and Marge" will be heard five times weekly, WJSV, early afternoon.

• • • •

Here and there: Little slips that came in the delivery service—a memo on my desk from WJSV's Ted Long (program boss) addressed to the "staff" suggesting that the microphone gentlemen "work" those little metal gadgets at a distance of about 10 inches rather than the 2 inches which has been the practice. It seems that the announcers have been literally crawling into the mike in making announcements, thereby minimizing the fidelity of voice reproduction on the air. WJSV's Shorty, who would be the page boy, evidently picked up the memo by msitake with some material for this desk.

• • • •

More here and there: Arrangements are going forward to broadcast the opening session of the Congress. Network mikes will bring nation-wide listeners the nomination and election of floor leaders among other features of the session . . . "Gang Busters" has been renewed for another 13 weeks on the air. So has Philips Lord's "We, the People," which gives Producer Lord something to feel pleased over in a season of withdrawals and cancellations . . . Maestro B. A. Rolfe is expected back on the air soon . . . Beatrice Lillie is subbing for Fannie Brice while the latter is on the road for two weeks.

All-Christmas program—"Come On, Let's Sing" presents Dr. Dafoe and Doris Doe, Met Opera singer, WJSV, at 9:30.

"Alice In Wonderland"—Meredith Willson and orchestra devote half hour to radio operetta, WRC, at 10:30.

"Afternoon Of a Faun"—Play suggested to Author Arch Obeler by Debussy's "L'Apres Midi D'Un Faun," with musical accompaniment, in "Lights Out," WRC, at 12:30 a. m.

The voice of Pope Pius will be heard by short wave from Italy early tomorrow morning over WJSV. The period will be from 6:30 to 7. For the benefit of those who cannot be up at that hour, WJSV will use the recorded version at 3:30 in the afternoon.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Girl Asks Advice on Budgeting Family Income of $335 a Month, and on Managing Unruly Brother.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Can you give me any suggestions as to how to cope with a 16-year-old brother? And on how to finance a family of six persons? I shall take up the matter of finances first. There is my widowed mother, aged 54, who makes $115 a month. She has two minor children, a son 16 and a daughter 13. Then there is my divorced sister, and her 6-year-old child. She makes $80, out of which she pays mother $18 a month, and $15 to a church home which keeps her child. She takes all her meals out. Lastly, there is myself. I make $140 a month, out of which I pay mother $40 a month, and buy all my meals out.

• • • •

Mother pays $65 a month rent for a 4-room apartment, and, considering Washington rentals, I don't believe we could find a similar size apartment for any less. My sister has her own room; mother and my youngest sister have the other bedroom; my brother sleeps in the dining room, and I sleep on a studio couch in the reception hall.

• • • •

Mother's health is not good, for she has had a strenuous time rearing her family. On my father's death two years ago she went to work outside the home. When she comes home from the office she should have rest and quiet for the remainder of the evening. But since we cannot afford a maid, she either has to cook a meal for herself and my brother and sister, or take them out to dinner. This, of course, runs into money. My hours are so irregular that I cannot afford to hire a maid and then eat my dinner out three or four nights a week. And I have a dentist and doctor bill amounting to $500 to pay off.

• • • •

I am 23 years old and intended to marry the summer my father died, but of course had to give up the plan. At that time I was the sole support of the family. I still go with the young man and some day hope to marry him, but the future looks pretty dark in that direction. I don't get proper rest because I have to wait until everyone else retires before I can. I would give anything to have a small apartment of my own where I could entertain, serve a few cocktails and dance. My mother is very strict on such matters, so I must forswear any entertaining under the circumstances. She knows, however, that I would like to have a place of my own and tells me to go ahead and get it, and not bother about her, but I can't do that. I know she can' manage without my help.

• • • •

We have often talked of separating: my older sister renting a room, my mother and two younger children getting a small apartment and my getting a room. Do you think it would be best for us to do this? or for us to stay together, considering all the points I have stated? (Please let me say I have a wonderful mother, who would do anything for any of us, despite her being so ultra-conservative in matters of drink and dancing.)

• • • •

Now, about my brother. He has many good points, but his bad points seem to outweigh them. He attends junior high school and does not work after school. He thinks I built hurt his pride to do the sort of work many boys of his age do. He has never been in any trouble, doesn't smoke or drink, but has absolutely no respect for my mother or anyone in the family. He is the sort of boy who is an angel outside the home and just the opposite indoors. He seldom gets home from school until midnight. He resents the fact he is the only "male" in the family. He fights with my younger sister and they create a furore every evening. He talks terribly to my mother and the rest of us. We have given up all hope of disciplining him.

When he is home he is either fighting, singing (for he has a very nice voice) or playing his violin. We have never discouraged him about music (in fact, we have encouraged him) but honestly, it almost drives a person insane to listen to it all the time. I bought a radio but never get a chance to listen to it because he won't stop singing or playing his violin just once in a while, even if asked.

We wanted to send him to a military school as that is the only place I know of where he would get the sort of discipline he needs. Of course we couldn't afford the tuition. We tried to arrange it through the Youth Administration, but our family would have to be on relief in order to get such aid. Do you know of any way in which this could be arranged? Or do you know of any school in which we could place him for $15 to $20 a month? Any suggestions as to how to handle him or how to solve our financial problem will be much appreciated. Sincerely,

LOCAL RESIDENT.

Try Suburban Life.

DEAR LOCAL RESIDENT: On a combined family income of $335 a month, it seems you should be able to manage much better than you do. The greatest budget-leakage seems to be your tendency to go your separate ways as individuals, rather than pull together as a family unit.

• • • •

I believe your first move to better your situation should be to take a house in the suburbs, with attic and basement. You might find such a house within your means, at a rental not to exceed $50 or $55 in Brookland or Cherrydale, for instance. I believe you should employ a full-time housekeeper, and that your sister might very well bring her child to live with the family. I believe the attic should be turned into studio quarters for your brother, or that he should be given a play room of sorts in the basement—where he can get entirely away from the family and have his friends in without undue supervision. I think some arrangement must be made whereby both you and your sister take breakfast and dinner at home.

• • • •

Let's consider the family's piecemeal earnings, and roughly draft a division of salaries and a budget of expenditure. Your sister earns $80 a month. If she had her child with her and were taking all, or most, of her meals at home, she might pay $40 a month for herself, and $15 a month for her child, leaving $25 a month additional for personal expenditures. Not much, to be sure, but equally as much as she would have if she supported herself wholly away from her mother's home.

• • • •

Out of your $140 you might give your mother $50 a month, taking most of your meals at home, and reserving $90 a month for personal expenditures and obligations. Of your mother's $115, she could put $60 aside for general household expenses, leaving $55 for other expenditures, such as clothing for herself and two minor children. Again, not much, but more than she might have if forced to manage entirely on her own income.

There you have a monthly pool of $165 out of which to keep the house running. Groceries might be estimated at 55 a month; rent at 55, maid at $35 a month; and fuel, gas and light bill at $15 or $20.

• • • •

If all adult members of the household assumed personal responsibility for keeping their rooms and intimate belongings in order, or collaborated or took turns in preparing breakfast, you should be able to find a maid for the salary you can afford. It might be possible, if you find a large enough house, to give her room and board and make her a member of the household. There are no doubt homeless, jobless women who would be glad to accept such a post. Or you might have one come in of afternoons to put the house in order and have dinner waiting.

• • • •

If staple foodstuffs intelligently bought in season are stocked in quantity an entire family may dine at home for about one-half what it would cost them to dine out, or breakfast out, as individuals. And that, as I said before, is where the greatest waste in your expenditure is incurred at present. Also, I think this tendency to pull apart is largely engendered by your living in too-cramped quarters. If you can find a house with three bedrooms, attic and basement, I think the housing problem would be solved. I believe such houses can be found, providing you are willing to forswear a fashionable, convenient-to-down-town address, and such niceties as up-to-the-minute architecture and interiors.

• • • •

Your sister and her child might have a room to themselves; another should be reserved for your mother and younger sister; you should have a third, and your brother should be fitted up in livable fashion in the attic. Many authorities on interior decorating have practical suggestions to offer on how to make such quarters eminently habitable for a boy. Such suggestions are often given in syndicated newspaper columns, in periodicals dealing with homemaking, and in leaflets distributed by the Federal Housing Administration and the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture.

Incidentally, you might get expert budgeting advice from Mrs. Rowena Schmidt Carpenter, of the Bureau of Home Economics of the Department of Agriculture. A pamphlet called "Diets to Fit the Family Income," issued by Mrs. Carpenter some months ago, created Nation-wide interest and was distributed by the thousands on demand. Mrs. Carpenter's specialty is budgeting family incomes. Her office is in the Department of Agriculture Building here in Washington.

• • • •

Now as for managing your brother: Try talking over his problem with the principal of the high school he attends. It is easy to guess which school that is, from the home address given in your letter. And I happen to know that particular educator possesses unusual understanding of boys, and has met with great success in handling difficult personalities when accorded family co-operation. If it is decided he would be better off in boarding school, and you cannot afford military school tuition, he might be entered in a local parochial school or in the Episcopal Home school in the Chevy Chase district, where junior high students are sent to the Alice Deal School. Tuition in these schools might be arranged at the price you say you can afford, namely, $20 to $25 a month.

• • • •

He should be made an integral part of a continuous 24-hour group routine, where he will automatically accustom himself to group discipline. This can be best provided in a boarding school, but, failing this, a progressive educator can devise ways and means for keeping him constructively occupied in after-hour public school affairs. It is possible you are spoiling him, and that a man could persuade him to find suitable work for evenings and week-ends where his womenfolk fail. You may get some very helpful advice on what tactics to pursue by talking with Miss Bertie Backus, principal of Alice Deal School. Miss Backus formerly headed the character education project in the district public schools (now discontinued for lack of funds) and is very wise in the ways and needs of the adolescent boy and girl.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Women's Page.

Housing Conditions Blamed on Indifference Of American Womanhood to Social Welfare

Mme. Schu-Reisz Finds Good Old Homes Crumbling and Few of New.

By Elizabeth Young.

A DYNAMIC little woman from Vienna now paying her fifth visit to America, points an accusatory finger at American womanhood and holds it largely to blame for the fact that American housing conditions are both a national eyesore and a grave menace to health and social welfare.

It has been ten years since Mme. Helene Scheu-Riesz was in America before, and she returns this time to find a housing situation that is "disquieting and dangerous," and an indifference to the situation on the part of American women which makes her "feel almost despair for the future of the race."

Outside of the big cities in the East she has seen few good modern houses, and as for housing conditions in the Middle West and country districts, she says: "So far as I can judge, they seem to me appalling. The small house is jerry-built or atrociously pompous. You see it parading as Spanish villa or Italian palazzo, playing at fancy dress and dazzling the eye of the passerby with a stucco splendor which often covers shoddy material or bad plumbing and fixtures. If it happens to be of good material and sound workmanship, the price is so prohibitive that only the rich could afford to own it."

Old Houses Crumbling.

All over the country she has seen good old houses crumbling to ruin, and—what is much more disquieting and dangerous—not enough good new ones being built.

"It is an extraordinary thing to me to see how very tepid an interest American women—as well as women the world over—take in the topic of housing," says Mme. Scheu-Riesz. "It is they who spend most of their time in the house; they who are most deeply bit by its deficiencies; they who know best what good houses or bad houses do for children. It is they that know that the house breeds health or sickness, happiness or misfortune, peace or war. And yet the percentage of women attending a housing conference makes me feel almost dispair for the future of the race."

Mme. Scheu-Riesz believes prosperity will return to America and to the world when women unite to demand that their families be "housed instead of herded." She urges women to "gather in crowds and hammer at the doors of town councils and federal administrations, demanding decent housing for the Nation." She urges them to "equip themselves with knowledge and go into real estate, the building trade and the architectural profession." She maintains that "women alone are responsible for the fact that even in a country so rich, powerful, clean, modern and hygienic as the United States, families are herded instead of housed."

Vienna Solution.

Mme. Scheu-Riesz told of the "thousands of 5-room houses in charming garden colonies" which blossomed in suburban Vienna under her late husband's leadership following the World War. Her husband, an attorney, headed Vienna's co-operative housing program under the Austrian Socialist regime.

"After the war, starving Vienna pulled its forces together and decided to concentrate on housing," she said. "Eighty thousand persons out of a population of 2,000,000 organized in Builders-and-Settlers Co-operatives. The city leased them land. Each member put in 2,000 hours of voluntary work. Men and women dug the ground, hauled sand in wheelbarrows, made bricks, did carpentry work or office work, until one-third of the family's housing cost was covered. It was easy to get a cheap loan on the other two-thirds, and in a few years thousands of 5-room houses in charming gardens colonies housed happy children whose fathers and mothers were sure of one thing—that they had done their best for the on-coming generation."

Mother of Architect.

"These co-operative houses," she says, "are still the pride of all the political parties in Vienna. The big and more spectacular tenement houses, though they were front page news for a long time, are in a way less successful than these garden suburb colonies. Of course, from the point of view of slum clearance, the big houses were almost a miracle. As skyscrapers, however, they cannot compare with those of America—except so far as low rentals are concerned."

Mme. Scheu-Riesz is well-known on two continents as lecturer, educator and advocate of world fellowship. One of her more notable achievements was the translation into German, just after the war, of children's classics of all languages, which she had published at her own expense. She has frequently lectured in America on conditions in post-war Europe, and this visit is no exception. Landing in New York in November, she went first to Minneapolis, Minn., to visit her architect daughter before going to Duke University and the University of North Carolina to lecture by request. Later she came to Washington to visit Mrs. Howard Beales and the latter's son, Prof. Harry K. Beales, whom she met in Vienna years ago. Prof. Beales teaches history at the University of North Carolina. While in Washington she lectured before Federal Housing groups.

Now on her fifth visit to America, Mme. Helene Scheu-Riesz, above, internationally known lecturer and educator, uses such words as "dangerous, disquieting and appalling," in describing her impressions of this country's housing conditions. She is a native of Austria.

Wide-Brimmed Straws Win Palm Beach Favor

Palm Beach (AP).—Palm Beach rather turns its nose up and its thumbs down on brimless hats. Early showings of straws are glamorous, wide brimmed affairs, trimmed with flowers. Colored straws are used in jewel tints and in pastels. Panamas are wide brimmed and low crowned. Stockings are sheer and flesh toned. The stockingless fad continues here among the younger set.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

A Hunting Hazard.

During the holiday season tens of thousands of nimrods (sons of Cush) will hie themselves to the great open spaces in pursuit of the leaping hare, cottontail or jackrabbit and as a result a few furry friends will fall before the hail of shot and shell. If the season runs true to form there will be some human fatalities and many injuries. Loaded guns will be carried and some of them dragged through hedges or wire fences by their muzzles.

Hunting, however, gets people out into the open, necessitates long tramps in the woods and fields, and is physically invigorating. But another of its hazards, particularly when the animals pursued are rabbits, is a disease known as tularemia. It was first recognized in Tulare County, Calif., and has been studied intensively for a dozen years. It is occasionally fatal, but at any rate is always long drawn out, few cases recovering under three months and some requiring six months or more.

The infection is spread through skinning or dressing diseased rabbits with bare hands. Inasmuch as the causative organism, the bacillus tularensis, is found in the blood of the animal, a tiny scratch on the hands or about the fingers may serve as a site of inoculation.

No doubt the condition has existed for a long time, and was diagnosed under other names before the microbe was positively identified. The only safe assumption, should any one become ill after handling a rabbit, is that tularemia may be present.

The disease manifests itself within from three to ten days after contact and the patient is quite ill. Sometimes the onset is characterized by an acute, painful swelling of the lymph glands beneath the arm. In other instances the eyes are involved and there may be marked swelling, irritation, and discharge of pus.

At the point of entrance a small, red pimple usually appears which becomes ulcerated.

After the patient has been ill for two weeks or so, blood agglutination tests can be made which, if positive, confirm the diagnosis definitely. Because of the similarity of many of the clinical symptoms of tularemia and undulant fever it is wise to test for the undulant fever organism at the same time.

Foshay of the University of Cincinnati advises the use of serum from goats vaccinated with the bacillus and 14 out of 15 patients so treated recovered without complications. This author believes that the employment of the serum shortens the duration of the attack and lessens the acute symptoms.

Resort Clothes Put Emphasis On Femininity

Costumes for Southland Also Put Stress on Note of Simplicity.

By Ethel Ehlen,

The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22.—Regardless of the allure of the Mediterranean or the Caribbean, you will want to follow the sunshine somewhere, just to be able to wear the new clothes designed for the Southland and cruising. Following the trend of the winter season, the Southern collections stress femininity—they also emphasize simplicity.

Of the numerous costumes viewed in the market, those designed by Clarepotter, noted American designer, were of special interest. Her creations are delightfully smart, simple and colorful; and feature a number of clever distinguishing notes. For instance, instead of the conventional buttons parading down the front of a frock, there are bone hooks and eyes, and collar buttons fastened with discs.

Fullness Featured.

Back fullness is featured in both her frocks and beach wear. Beach coats, in the 1937 manner, by the way, have more of the appearance of chic evening coats than casual toppings for the bathing suit. Tunic sports dresses are of the new knee length, with shorts underneath. And shorts, full pleated giving the appearance of skirts, are the last word in tennis attire.

A subtle, soft shade of green called almond, and a warm tone named Indian brown, are other important Clarepotter Southern notes. Whether the costume is destined for the beach, active sports, informal afternoon or dancing, it invariably has an accompanying coat—an abbreviated jacket, or longer tunic coat. Sometimes the coat is of self-material and sometimes it is of dramatic color and fabric contrast.

Prints in this collection feature both small and large flower patterns; but always, they are dignified and pleasing—both in color theme and design.

Linens in Evidence.

Linens are also much to the fore; sheer crepe linens and those of rather heavy texture. A distinguishing feature of Clarepotter's linens, for both daytime and evening, is the smartly simple hand stitching, outlining seams and forming the only trimming note. Her slacks are not the cumbersome and ungainly affairs of the old school, but beautifully fitted about the waist line and hips. Slacks, it is predicted, will be much in evidence in the coming summer resort picture, Replacing the culotte of last year!

For wear on the boat, cruising to Southern climes, or cool evenings ashore, there is a lovely new sheer woolen, called alponge. Pastel tints of the grayed variety are the smart colors in this category; particularly dusty pink and muted blues. Blues, from dark navy through royal and poudre blues, are everywhere present throughout the Southern collections.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Dec. 22.

ALWAYS Mother's Little Helper. I've picked up a morbid notion for a Day-After-Christmas party for those of you still on your feet and willing to come back for more.

ALICE HUGHES.

This dismal to-do is the brain - wave of my pal Mabel Schirmer, my candidate for the title of New York's Handsomest and Most Eligible Grass - Widow. Mabel's thought is both simple and profound. The thing is called "The Terrible Christmas Gift Party and Post-Mortem." Each guest is instructed to bring the most gosh-awful present he or she received from loving relatives or enemies.

That is, Papa can bring those two geranium ties thoughtfully sent by Aunt Minnie, while your offering can be the hideous shell-lamps from Miami, the gift of that cat you always beat at bridge.

After the pick-me-ups, sandwiches and nervous talk suitable to the day, lots are drawn, for the monstrosities, and you stagger home burdened with something more horrible than the object you arrived with. The thing can then be dropped surreptitiously into a street-corner trash can, and the whole matter will thus be happily cleared up. Nobby, eh?

Add to this practical result of such an orgy the howls and screams of laughter that will greet the ghastly gifts, and you can see that such a shinnanigan can easily become one of the smash social hits of the year. Or wouldn't you rather go into this? Maybe we'd better just drop the things down our own incinerators, or bury them in the back yard after dark!

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Note without comment—Miss Victoria Graham of this place, was married the other day to Mr. Joseph Bonetti, of Florence, Italy . . . The town is again a seething mass of movie stars. Errol Flynn and Lili Damita, the most beautiful couple I've ever seen, have been making most of the parties, and "21," that greatest of celeb-haunted saloons, raised one eyebrow, a real condescension from the "sophisticated" spot, when Gloria Swanson and Herbert Marshall did a sweep into the place the other night. Local handicapers had pronounced this romance defunct, with La Swanson interested in quite another party . . .

• • • •

Dorothy Mackaill, on the other hand, has ditched us for Lunnon, where a gent of the name of Lord Brecknock (I mean it) is said to be interested in the lovely Dorothy both professionally and personally. Dorothy's by all odds the prettiest of the "silent stars" still round and about—though Claire Windsor (remember?) makes it practically a dead heat. These beaucheous blondes certainly do take keer of their selves.

• • • •

I was dead wrong when I said the other day that Winifred Lenihan's show, "Black Limelight," had folded quietly. It took a new lease on life, and runs along . . . Violet Sweet Haven, the Washington writing-girl who has been working for the Attorney General's office, certainly wins the year's persistence prize. She fought her way to enough magazine assignments to win a trip to Hongkong on the China Clipper. Good goin', Vi! . . .

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

OUR ANCESTRESSES knitted and crocheted for dear life, to say nothing of weaving. It was serious business to them, because they had the responsibility of keeping their families clothed by their own handiwork.

Today we knit and crochet for pleasure and make handwork because it is rare and lovely, rather than from necessity.

Take Nell's bed, for instance. It's beautiful and old and very large—a massive poster that was in the White House once upon a time. Of course, there are lots of spreads she could have used on it. But none of them half so suitable as an old crocheted one—white and rather thick.

So Nell went to work and made herself the loveliest white crocheted bedspread we've seen. It took ages, of course. She said she thought she'd turn to a square before she was through. But what a stunning room that turned out to be. She had the walls papered in a figured paper predominantly orchid. Then used a flounce of white dotted swiss around the bottom of the bed, with this same material for the canope ruffle.

The rug in this room was a lavender broadloom and the draperies were shell pink taffeta over white dotted swiss curtains. And for the dressing table skirt dotted swiss with a draped yoke of shell pink. Then the culminating touch of femininity—a chaise longue in a light gray corduroy slip cover (because corduroy washes so beautifully), with a shell pink afghan and a heap of lavender and pink cushions.

Family Fills White House For Holidays

Children, Grand Children Gathering to Insure Happy Christmas.

'Sistie' and 'Buzzie' Fete 40 Young Friends at Afternoon Party.

By Marylyn Reeve.

The White House is humming with Christmas spirit.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt are gradually gathering in all the members of their family for the holidays. Young Franklin Roosevelt, jr., will be out of the hospital and home by Christmas Eve. Today the James Roosevelts, with their young daughters, Sarah and Kate, are arriving, while the Elliot Roosevelts—now more frequently called the "southern members of the Roosevelt family"—with Ruth Chandler and Elliott, jr., are already here awaiting Santa Claus. Johnny Roosevelt, too, is already at the White House, as are his niece and nephew, "Sistie" and "Buzzie."

Sistie and Buzzie have given their elders reason to believe they no longer have great faith in the white-whiskered gentleman from the North. Their grandmother was the first to suspect the illusion had vanished, but as yet they have not "owned up to it." They wrote no letters to Kris Kingle, but ever so carefully they went through the catalogue of a large New York toy store and marked everything they wanted.

Each day finds the "house party" at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue growing, each additional arrival giving promise of more merriment on Friday. Today Mrs. James Roosevelt will come down from her home in New York to be with her son and his family. Although nothing is definite as yet, Miss Ethel du Pont is planning to be here for Christmas afternoon and possibly for dinner at the White House, after spending the morning with her own family in Delaware.

There will be no dance at the Executive Mansion Saturday for the boys and their friends, but there will be parties for the grandchildren of President and Mrs. Roosevelt. Yesterday afternoon, in fact, Sistie was youthful hostess to about 40 of her little friends. The merrymakers were entertained with two plays, "Street Fair" and "Elephant Gay," and later such rollicking songs as "Merry-Go-Round," "How the Elephant Got His Trunk," "Mickey Mouse," "Jolly Cowboy" and several others. Monday afternoon there will be another party for the even younger children.

Today seems to be Carol Day at the White House, with a group of Girl Scouts coming early this evening to sing Christmas songs in the East Room. Somewhat later, a picturesque truck of carol singers from the Department of Agriculture will call.

Early Thursday morning, the First Lady will go to the Capitol Theater to help the Central Union Mission distribute toys. From then on her day is filled with "crowded hours." She will wish her Merry Christmas to the "office force" at noon; have luncheon, visit the Salvation Army headquarters; return to the White House, go from there to a community tree, and still later an alley tree.

Christmas Day will start very early—when Sistie and Buzzie—following their usual custom, will bounce out of their beds promptly at 7 o'clock and race in to awaken their grandmother. While she closes the windows, they will make the rounds and rouse everyone else, then to the President's room. There, over the great fireplace are hung the stockings of the entire family, each marked with care (especially those of the youngest ones). As a cheery fire crackles in the grate, everybody from the President down to little Elliott, jr., busily opens stockings.

After breakfast and, of course, church, there will be the Christmas tree and still more presents to be inspected. Then, after a fleeting afternoon, early dinner so that the older grandchildren may be present, the President and his family will call it a day.

Gen. Azcarate Off By Plane to Pass Holiday in Mexico

Brig. Gen. Juan F. Azcarate left yesterday by airplane for Mexico City to spend the Christmas holidays with Mme. Azcarate and their three children, who have been in Mexico for eight months. Gen. Azcarate will return shortly after the New Yaer.

Mr. and Mrs. David H. Frank and Mrs. Mabel Simon, of Woodley Park Towers, are spending Christmas at the El Mirador Hotel, Palm Springs, Calif., and will motor to Los Angeles for New Year's celebration, and later sail for Honolulu.

Capital Girl Makes Debut At Sulgrave

Miss Ethel Worthington Is Honored at Gala Club Dance.

Christmas greens from the Worthington estate, Cherokee Lodge, in Georgia, formed the decorations at the dance given last night by Mrs. Ralph Worthington in honor of her debutante daughter, Miss Ethel Worthington. The Sulgrave Club was transformed into a setting of smilax and calla lilies, whose colors made a charming symphony of green and white.

At Mrs. Worthington's own debut, flowers and greens from Cherokee Lodge also formed the decorations. Last evening, both she and her daughter were dressed in white, Miss Worthington wearing a tulle frock with a full skirt with white orchids, and her mother a gown of white chiffon.

Many members of the younger set, as well as the older members of Washington society, were in the group which danced at the club until well into the night. Several dinners were given before the party, including one at which Mr. Myron Hofer entertained in honor of Miss Susan Jay and Miss Margot Garrett, who made her debut at a large and beautiful ball last month at the Sulgrave Club.

Mathesons Entertain.

Miss Margaret Matheson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Matheson, entertained at a dinner in honor of Miss Worthington and members of her house party, guests here from out of town for the dance.

The dinner was given at Wellington, the Matheson estate beyond Alexandria, where Christmas greens decorated the historic home, and deep red roses were used on the tables.

Miss Matheson wore a frock of blue taffeta, trimmed in darker blue velvet and made with a full skirt and sleeves puffed at the shoulders. Mrs. Matheson's gown of black crepe was brightened by a large red velvet rose in front.

Among the guests from out-of-town were Miss Edith Whitridge and Miss Cecil Gibson, Baltimore debutantes of the season; Miss Natalie Strickland and Miss Honey Harris, of Valdosta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Adam T. Luke, Miss Worthington's brother-in-law and sister, from New York; Miss Anne Barrett and Mr. Richard Barrett, of Warrenton; Miss Judith Black and Mr. Robert Black, of Pelham, N. Y.; Miss Sibyl King, of Irvington, N. Y.; Miss Martha O'Brien, of Louisville, Ky.; Mr. Jerry Webb, of Upperville; Miss Marjorie Wallace, Miss Margaret Slook, Mr. Alfred Hubbar, Mr. Lawrence Sherwood, Miss Mary Louise McLendon, Miss Herbert Merrick, Mr. Agnew Bahson, of New York, and Mr. George Worthington, of Cleveland, a cousin of Miss Worthington's.

Debutantes Fetes.

Mr. and Mrs. Matheson are entertaining again on Christmas night at a large dance.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin was hostess to a small group of debutantes and their friends at a supper in her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. Her two sons, Mr. MacDonald Goodwin and Mr. Norton Goodwin, have many friends among the younger set.

Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Meigs entertained at dinner for their daughters, Miss Mary Meigs and Miss Sarah Meigs, who made their debuts last winter, both in this city and in Philadelphia.

Miss Gordon, Miss Boyden Make Debuts

Smith College Student Presented by Parents at Mayflower.

Two more holiday debutante parties, both tea dances, took place yesterday afternoon when Miss Amonett Gordon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Boyle Gordon, of Alexandria, and Miss Margaret Lillington Boyden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Nanson Boyden, were presented to Capital society.

Miss Gordon, a Smith College freshman home for the holidays, made her bow at a tea dance given at the Mayflower Hotel by her parents. The debutante wore a white frock made on Empire lines, with a slight train and puffed sleeves, and carried an arm bouquet of deep-red roses.

Several younger members of Washington society assisted Miss Gordon during the afternoon. They included Miss Gertrude Pearson, who made her debut Thanksgiving Day; Miss Margaret Matheson, Miss Sally Mitchell LeFevre, Miss Margaret Abell, Miss Anine Carter Waller, Miss Mary Whitely, who was presented to society earlier in the week, and Miss Suzanne Kappler, another of this season's debutantes.

Miss Margaret Gordon, younger sister of the debutante, with Miss Patricia Prochnik, daughter of the Austrian Minister and Mme. Prochnik, also assisted during the afternoon. Miss Gordon's frock of brown velvet was trimmed with mink, and Miss Prochnik wore black.

Mrs. Gordon, who was gowned in a Lanvin model of bright Christmas green, with a corsage of gardenias, was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Gardiner Lloyd Booth, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Louis Scott, Mrs. Lloyd Finley, Mrs. Julien Friant, Mrs. Thomas E. Sebrell, jr., Mrs. Harry W. Blair, Mrs. Frank Mason Dillard, Mrs. Harry H. Semmes and Mrs. James Gavin Field.

Miss Boyden Presented

A Christmas setting of Southern smilax and holly formed the decorations at the Colonial Dames Club, where Miss Boyden was presented. The debutante wore, instead of the usual white, a gown of aquamarine satin with a net overdress, and carried yellow roses. Mrs. Boyden wore green velvet.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyden reside at Kalorama, Prince Georges County, and many guests from Virginia and Maryland were present at the tea. Mrs. Boyden, who attended Friends' School in Washington and St. Catherine's in Richmond, was among the debutantes at the First Bachelors' Cotillion in Baltimore.

Mrs. Boyden was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Edwin Pearson Parker; Mrs. Marion Butler, Mrs. Harry Robinson, Mrs. Herman Hollerith, Mrs. Hughes Oliphant, Mrs. Nettie Yelverton, Mrs. Edwin Pearson Parker, jr., Mrs. Marion Hall, of West River; Mrs. Harold Knapp, of Prince Georges County, Md.; Mrs. Joseph Addison, of Baltimore, and her sisters, Miss Anna Parker and Mrs. William Otis Bailey.

The debutantes assisting were Miss Mary Senate Howes, Miss Martha Talley, Miss Virginia Palmer, Miss Beverley Moffett, Miss Agnes Taliferro, of Baltimore, who made her bow at the First Bachelors' Cotillion, and Miss Mary McRea Boyden, sister of the debutante,

THE MERRY WHIRL
by MARYLYN

Not even a bad spill caused by a jittery horse and a ticklish jump kept Johnny Roosevelt from entering the horse show last night at Fort Myer. He certainly must have finished his shopping early to be able to spend his spare time schooling his mount. He is a very nice rider, but then he comes by it naturally.

The show was preceded by several dinners. Among them was the one given by Col. and Mrs. Jonathan Wainwright in their quarters. Their guests included Col. and Mrs. William A. Johnson, from Fort Belvoir; Col. and Mrs. Alexander Cooper, Col. and Mrs. John A. Crane and their house guest, Mrs. Jan de Vries, of Holland, and Chaplain Ralph Deibert. Maj. and Mrs. Arthur Thayer and Lieut. and Mrs. Leslie H. Wyman also were hosts at dinners before the show.

Engagements like Christmas cards are beginning to shower upon us. Saturday there will be a very interesting announcement—sorry we can not mention names, but you know—concerning a very pretty blonde young lady and a West Point cadet, the son of a high ranking officer in the Army.

* * * *

Speaking of cards, Jeffy O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency, has sent out the most original and thoughtful ones we have yet seen. Ours arrived. It is a message printed on his office stationery and signed by him:

"Christmas—what memories are recalled in the candles' lengthening shadows, in the fireplace's flickering flame.

"Christmas — When friendship's dividends are declared in expressions of good will and charity, when the disappointments of the yesterdays are forgotten in the silver chimes of a happier day.

"These dividends, more precious than any metal, are my Christmas greeting to you."

* * * *

Mrs. Consuelo Seoane is going on the air today. This afternoon at 2:45 o'clock she will tell of the Christmas customs in the different lands. What with her traveling, not to mention the legion of friends she has among those from other countries, it will be most interesting, we know. Along with the talk there will be national anthems and typical carols, arranged by Winifred Howell Artraud.

Orange Recipe Of D. C. Matron Gets $3 Prize

Mrs. W. A. Millen Is Given First Award by The Post for Tropical Island.

WE DON'T have to eat raw oranges and drink orange juice to get the benefit of their iron and their sweet citron flavor. This fact was proven by the numerous recipes submitted for The Post Orange Recipe last week.

The first prize of $3 was won by Mrs. W. A. Millen, 3627 T street northwest, for her recipe for Tropical Island.

The second prize of $2 was awarded to Dorothy Peterson, 1904 G street northwest, for her recipe for Orange Waffles; the third prize of $1 went to Mrs. Ida Pierson, Leesburg, Va.; the fourth prize, $1, went to Mrs. T. S. Bernard, jr., 1212 Prince Edward street, Fredericksburg, Va., and the fifth prize, also $1, was awarded Mrs. Pauline Thornhill, Seat Pleasant, Md.

Here is Mrs. Millen's recipe:

Tropical Island.

18 Lady fingers
3 cups orange cream
1 cup grated cocoanut
½ cup sherry
12 red Maraschino cherries
12 green Maraschino cherries
½ cup pecan meats, ground.

Line a round glass dish with lady fingers. Pour sherry over cocoanut in a bowl and toss till sherry is absorbed. Pour orange cream on lady fingers, sprinkle cocoanut over that, and strew top with drained cherries that have been stuffed with pecan meats.

Orange Cream.

½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2 eggs
1½ cups milk
1 cup orange juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 banana

Mix sugar, flour and eggs. Add hot milk, slowly, stirring until thick. Add orange and lemon juices and banana, mashed smooth. Chill. Several hours in the refrigerator helps blend the flavors.

Miss Peterson's recipe:

Orange Waffles.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
6 tablespoons sugar
3 eggs
½ cup milk
Grated rind of one orange
¼ cup melted butter
¼ cup melted lard
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup orange juice

Sift the dry ingredients. Beat egg yolks thoroughly. Add the orange juice and rind to egg yolks and milk. Add melted butter and lard. Then mix with dry ingredients. Lastly, add the well-beaten egg whites. Cook on hot waffle iron and serve with orange marmalade or whipped cream sweetened and flavored with orange rind and two tablespoons orange juice and one-half teaspoon lemon juice.

Mrs. Pierson's recipe follows:

Orange Almond Bread.

2 tablespoons shortening
4 tablespoons sugar
1 egg
2 cups wheat flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
1 cup sliced almonds

Beat the shortening, sugar and egg together. Sift the flour, baking powder and salt together and add to the first mixture alternately with the orange juice and rind. Blend thoroughly and add the nuts. Put a few thin slices of oranges on top. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven (325 F.) for 1 hour.

Mrs. Bernard's recipe:

Mock Macaroons.

2 eggs
¼ cup butter, melted
1¼ cups sugar
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder
4½ cups soft bread crumbs
Grated rind of 1 orange

Beat the eggs. Stir in the melted butter. Beat in sugar, add orange juice and rind. Sift the dry ingredients together and stir into first mixture. Add soft bread crumbs and mix well. Drop by spoonfuls on baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350 F.) ten minutes or until browned.

Here is Mrs. Thornhill's recipe:

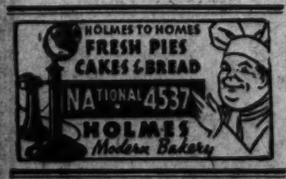
Toasted Orange Sticks.

½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons baking powder
2 eggs
1 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons grated orange rind

Cream the butter with the sugar. Sift the dry ingredients together. Stir eggs into butter and sugar. Beat well. Add flour alternately with the orange juice. Add orange rind and mix thoroughly. Pour into well-buttered shallow pan. Brush with milk or slightly beaten egg white to obtain glossy surface. Bake in moderate oven for 45 minutes, or until (well done) through. Cut cake into strips and toast in a moderate oven until gold brown. Cool and store in airtight tin. These bars may be varied by the addition of nuts, dates or raisins, and are especially good with frozen desserts, fruit mixtures and gelatines.

Patricia Ellis' Cap.

For an evening lark Patricia Ellis, movie actress, dons a little cap of fine silk gauze dyed to match her own brown-gold locks. She has the back done into little curls of the material to give the effect of her own coiffure.



Christmas Cake Has Festive Garb

Of course you will serve fruit cake at your holiday dinner and egg-nog party, but why not surprise your friends and include a chocolate cake with festive white icing. The Christmas tree decoration is outlined by tiny candles or with frosting pressed through a pastry tube. Since candles are so attractive and are no longer being used to trim trees, decorate your Christmas cake with them.

Candles on Christmas Cake Brighten Holiday Dinner Table

Frosted Tree of Colored Icing With Blazing Tapers on Each Branch Makes an Excellent Centerpiece; Cream Cheese Added to Chocolate Gives Unusual Flavor.

WHAT would Christmas be without candles? And since we no longer trim our trees with candles, lighted on the eve of the holiday to help Kris Kringle on his way, we find a place for them on the Christmas cake.

Of course you will have fruit cake for your holiday dinner and egg-nog party, but why not surprise your friends with an easy-to-make chocolate cake with a white-as-snow icing. Trim the cake as you would your Christmas tree, by making a frosting tree of colored icing and placing a candle on the tip of each branch. You may outline the tree with tiny candles or with frosting pressed through a pastry tube. With the candles blazing, such a cake would be an excellent centerpiece for a dinner or buffet table.

If you prefer, a chocolate frosting with cream cheese added gives an unusual flavor to the cake. Select your own colors for the tree trimming.

Christmas Cake.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup cocoa
1 1-3 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
½ cup shortening
2-3 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift the flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda, salt and cocoa and sift again. Add sweetened condensed milk, shortening which has been melted, water and vanilla. Beat until thoroughly mixed. Pour into 2-layer cake pans (8 inch). Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) 35 minutes.

Magic Snow Icing.

¾ cup sweetned condensed milk
2 or 3 tablespoons vanilla
2½ cups confectioner's sugar, sifted

Blend sweetened condensed milk and vanilla thoroughly. Add sugar gradually until right consistency to spread. Beat until smooth and creamy. Spread on the cake. This makes enough frosting to cover two (9 inch) layers or top and sides of loaf cake or about 24 cup cakes.

Reserve a small quantity to which cocoa should be added to give desired color. Put through pastry tube to form outline of Christmas tree. Place small birthday candle in holder at the tip of each branch.

Creamy Chocolate Frosting.

1 package of cream cheese
¼ cup sweetened condensed milk
1½ cups confectioner's sugar
2 squares unsweetened chocolate (melted)
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla

Mash the cream cheese with silver fork; add sweetened condensed milk, and beat until smooth. Add sifted confectioner's sugar, gradually. Add chocolate, salt and vanilla, and beat until thoroughly blended. Makes enough frosting to cover two (8 inch) layers, or top and sides of loaf cake, or about 18 cup cakes. A very smooth creamy frosting that keeps well.

Broiling Simple Task With Pre-Heated Oven

With the event of the newer method of cooking meat, broiling has become a simple task. The lower temperatures being advocated nowadays are largely responsible for this simplification.

The broiling oven is thoroughly pre-heated. Then the meat is placed far enough from the source of heat that only one turning is necessary. By the time one side is nicely browned, the steak or chop is half done and is seasoned, turned and allowed to brown and finish cooking on the second side.

Home-Made Food Acceptable as Gift

If you decide to bake your Christmas presents, you will be amazed at the low cost of your gifts.

The perfect answer to "what-to-give" would be individual pumpkin pies in their little tin plates, a plum pudding or fruit cake wrapped in cellophane, a box of assorted cookies or candies or one of various meats, as whole hams, or fancy sausages which the packers are now putting up in special wrappings for gift purposes. A big red bow or a sprig of holly is all that is needed in the way of decoration for these acceptable gifts.

Attractive boxes of canned fruits or vegetables are practical gifts and will be more appreciated than you suspect. Fancy ready-prepared foods are especially welcome.

GLAZED SQUASH WITH PINEAPPLE

Cut squash in diamond-shaped pieces. Boil until tender, scrape out pulp and mash. To 2 cups squash add 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, 1 tablespoon sugar and ¼ to ½ cup crushed pineapple. Refill shells, top with marshmallows, sprinkle with brown sugar and glaze under the broiler.

Breakfast Dodging Termed a Bad Habit

Abstainers Should Be Weaned Away Gradually.

Much has been said about the non-breakfast eaters, but it is almost impossible to change their eating habits. This habit, deplorable from a nutritional standpoint, is probably due to the fact that people have for years denied themselves a good, nourishing breakfast in favor of a few minutes' sleep.

Gradually, these sleepy people have become convinced that a good breakfast would be a safeguard for health and a contributing factor to increased efficiency during the morning hours at work. However, there would be nothing gained by forcing a huge breakfast on a stomach that is uninterested and unprepared.

A good start on the breakfast-eating habit would be to drink a glass of fruit juice each morning for a week. Vary the kinds—prune and pineapple juice—to maintain interest.

In the second week continue the fruit juice and add a slice of buttered toast. Vary this, too.

Then each succeeding week make breakfast slightly more substantial until it is a hearty meal, always remembering that it must be made inviting in appearance.

Apple Pudding.

Fill a buttered baking dish with sliced apples and pour over a batter made of 1 tablespoon of butter, ½ cup sugar, 1 egg, ½ cup sweet milk, 1 cup flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder. Bake in moderate oven. Serve with liquid sauce.

Chicken With Noodles In Casserole Simple

As a variation in the menu, nothing could be better than noodles with chicken in casserole. It's so simple—no trick at all to do it to a king's or a queen's taste.

Pour the noodles cooked in broth into a buttered baking dish. Stir into them two cups of cooked chicken and a quart of milk. Top with buttered bread crumbs. Brown in a moderate oven. Serve piping hot.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Radio Mag

Beginning with January the Office of Education will issue a monthly magazine entitled "The World Is Yours" for distribution to the thousands of listeners to the Office of Education-Smithsonian Institution Sunday morning broadcasts, dramatizing the Smithsonian.

The magazine will consist of 24 pages, eight of them to be given over to rotogravure art. Reading contents will include two pages of explanatory material for each of the broadcasts to be given that month (this will replace the weekly background sheets sent out by the radio project); a Smithsonian scientific story of the month (the January issue will deal with Dr. Charles G. Abbotts much-publicized solar machine); and other scientific and educational material. The first number will include a story on the Smithsonian Institution. Twenty-five thousand copies of the January issue are to be printed.

Bernard Schoenfeld, who has been doing the "World Is Yours" radio scripts will be the editor, with William N. Thompson and Thomas A. Reynolds as art editors. Schoenfeld, incidentally, will be married to a New Haven, Conn., belle—Ethel Davis is the name—during the Christmas holidays.

Prosperity—or affluence of some sort—seems to have hit the radio project in other ways too. Lamar Kelley has come down from New York City to take charge of publicity; while about half a dozen stenographers are to be taken on.

It happened some 30 to 35 years ago, but the superintendent of documents still carries this little item in his monthly catalogue: "The monthly notice to mariners, formerly issued by the Coast and Geodetic Survey has been consolidated with and made a part of the notice to mariners issued by the Lighthouse Bureau."

Credit Unions.

Local officials seem to feel that Acting Comptroller General R. N. Elliott needlessly prodded a hornet's nest in his decision stating that departments had no legal authority to grant space to their employes for credit unions.

The question was not raised by the Postoffice Department, but was brought up by a General Accounting Office field inspector who found a credit union occupying such space in a Federal building. Elliott asked the Postoffice Department for the facts and when they were supplied handed down his decision that there was no authority in law for such a use of Federal premises.

Elliott's decision was reprinted in the Postoffice Department's daily bulletin—but the department was careful to issue no accompanying orders, leaving it up to the local postmasters to do as they see fit. And there the matter rests, with the exception that a letter asking legislation to permit the granting of space to credit unions has been sent to the President by the National Legislative Council of Federal Employe Organizations.

Since no expense vouchers are involved the General Accounting Office will find it difficult to enforce its decision. Postal authorities feel the question should never have been brought up. The value of credit unions to employe morale isn't doubted by anyone and postal authorities feel that the Comptroller General's action has needlessly endangered their existence.

Equal Rights Charter Due To Stir Fight

Would Give to Women Privileges Denied the Men, Backers Say.

Smoldering dissension over a proposed national charter for women which has been the subject of secret conferences between equal rights advocates for the past several weeks is expected to flare into open warfare when the document is made public, it was learned last night.

The battle will center around a provision in the charter which its advocates declare would "give women, not only full rights with men but special privileges that men do not have."

So secretly has the charter been prepared that even leaders of some of the strongest women organizations which have considered it admit frankly they do not know who is the author of the plan.

An official announcement of the "women's charter" with a list of the organizations indorsing it is supposed to be released in the next few days. The Washington Post, however, has obtained a draft of the charter as it read last night. It follows:

Security Demanded.

"Women shall have full political and civil rights, full opportunity for education, opportunity to work in all occupations according to individual ability, and to be compensated without discrimination because of sex or race; to be assured of livelihood; and where special exploitation of women workers exists, the inequalities affecting them shall be corrected and protection afforded by social and labor legislation against low wages which are less than the living standards attainable; against physical exhaustion and denial of the rights of leisure resulting from bad hours and night work, and against unhealthy working conditions, particularly where biological differences and the customary social obligations of women for the care of children for work at home make them adverse conditions especially for women individually and for the society."

A hint of the impending battle came when Miss Elsie M. Hill, former national chairman of the Women's Party and at present a member of the National Board, indignantly declared:

"As yet anonymous opponents of the principle of equal rights for men and women are reported to have brought forth a blanket inequality document clumsily masquerading as a 'woman's charter'. It is a belated attempt to revive the horse and buggy era concept of the position of women in a society run for and by the men. It echoes and re-echoes the anti-sufferage psychology familiar to the campaigners for equal sufferage. It advocates one law for men and another law for women in a world where men and women live and work side by side.

Frankfurter Assailed.

"Veterans of the national suffrage campaign are reminded of the miserable Shaforth-Palmer substitute amendment of 1914 drafted, it was said, by Prof. Felix Frankfurter, an open opponent of the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment.

"The 'woman's charter' also is representative of Prof. Frankfurter's belief in the social efficacy of subjecting females to special legal restrictions not applying to males in the same occupation.

"I believe the rumored 'woman's charter' of inequality will be shoved into the ignominous discard it deserves even before it emerges from anonymity."

A number of powerful women's organizations are believed to have representatives interested and active in the venture. Officials of the Women's Trade Union League, the National League of Women Voters, the Consumers League and the National Federation of Business and Professional Women are supposed to have a part in it.

The National Woman's Party, however, disclaims even to have been consulted about the proposed charter.

Santa Claus, it was discovered yesterday, lives not at the North Pole, but in a "mausoleum" on the fringe of St. Mary's Cemetery, where he will hold a grand party Christmas Eve and distribute $100 worth of toys to neighborhood children.

"I picked them out myself," said Dr. Philo Laos Mills, hermit priest of Lincoln road. "The bicycle alone cost $50. And see the fine moving picture machine!"

Carefully arrayed on a table in Dr. Mills' retreat, known as "Mausoleum of the Magi, Mount Carmel," were games, shiny little autos, tin cowboys, dolls, trains and knick-knacks, the whole surmounted by a trimmed Christmas tree. The bicycle, standing alongside, was an ecstacy in chromium, equipped with speedometer and headlight.

Author, scholar, painter, linguist and philosopher, Father Mills has been a Santa Claus to neighborhood youngsters ever since he built his mausoleum almost 20 years ago. One of them, 12-year-old Joseph Spencer, is scheduled to get the fancy bicycle.

Parents to Attend.

Joseph, who lives at 218 Channing street northeast, is cook and caretaker for the recluse Catholic priest. He walked in yesterday as Father Mills was telling the reporter and photographer he would not pose for a picture without "my chief altar boy."

Soon after sunset tomorrow the community boys and girls who are the friends of the priest will gather, many of them with their parents, in the odd edifice at 2315 Lincoln road northeast, to receive their presents.

"After the party," said the priest, who might have inspired the poet Browning to write another "Fra Lippo Lippi," "I shall take a snooze. Then I shall conduct midnight mass in my chapel."

The chapel, which is probably the tiniest in Washington, has a piano and a bass viol, or bull fiddle. But the music for the mass will be provided not by either of them but by a radio, said Father Mills, who celebrated his silver jubilee last April by saying mass at St. Martin's.

That was the first such service at which he had officiated since he left his post as assistant pastor of fashionable St. Matthew's Church for a life of mediation and retrospection.

"I'm an independent kind of a guy," said Father Mills.

That just about sums up his mode of existence. Unconventional, yes, but with the approbation of Pope Pius XI and his immediate predecessor, the late Pope Benedict XV. Upon the walls of his mausoleum hang framed documents issued in Rome conferring honorary degrees and giving papal dispensations.

On Christmas Day he will be a dinner guest of the mother of his chief altar boy, Joseph Spencer, and after that he will muster a group of children and take them to a neighborhood movie.

Lives Amid Books.

Inscribed over the archway leading into the chapel is the quotation: "We have seen His star in the East and have come to worship Him." Visitors—and Father Mills has a good many of them at Yuletide—know without asking that these are the words of the Magi but they want to know, one and all, why the solitary guardian calls his tabernacle a mausoleum.

"I'm the corpse," he tells them. "A living copse."

Tourists from places as far away as California and Florida have dropped in on the wayside priest, past whose chapel-dwelling hundreds of autos whiz every day. The structure, with its golden crosses and its inscription, stands out conspicuously among the surrounding tombstones.

Father Mills sleeps on a rude cot in a narrow alcove just off the "living room" of the mausoleum. In the latter are his large library of theological books, his hand-made sailing ship and train models, a collection of his published works and framed testimonials of his rank and honors.

Right now, though, he is interested mainly in the dozens of toys which he bought out of his savings.

"They ought to like them, don't you think?" he asks anxiously.

"This car"—pointing to a smart towing truck in bright red—"I'm going to give to the son of a garage man I know."

Rankin Is Set For Renewal Of PVA Fight

Legislator Claims New Support for Potomac River Project.

By James D. Secrest.

A renewed effort will be made at the coming session of Congress to enact legislation establishing a Potomac Valley Authority, modeled after the Tennessee Valley Authority, Representative Rankin, of Mississippi, candidate for majority leader, said yesterday.

Although the measure received scant support last year when it was introduced, Rankin believes it will obtain substantial backing now because of the disaster of the spring floods along the Potomac.

President Roosevelt last winter was one of the first to declare the plan unfeasible, but in October of this year he told a station audience at Cumberland, Md., he wanted to see a water conservation project started on the Potomac with a dam near Cumberland.

Consequently, it is believed that the President might favor legislation aimed at preventing future floods, even though he would not approve such a broad development as proposed by the co-author of the TVA act.

Attitude Uncertain.

Rankin said he has not been informed as to what the President's attitude is at present on his plan. When reintroduced the bill will again be referred to the House Rivers and Harbors Committee.

The only change the Mississippian intends to make, he said, is to reduce salaries of the administrators from $15,000 to $10,000 to conform with the TVA.

The PVA would be controlled by three administrators, named by the President and confirmed by the Senate, subject to the condition that they had no power company connections for three years prior to their appointments.

A survey to determine possibilities and costs of improving the Potomac River by eliminating pollution, making it a source of drinking water for Washington and other adjacent communities, and of making it navigable as far as Cumberland would be one of the first tasks of the authority.

Could Start at Once.

It would be empowered, however, to proceed with the acquisition of lands, rights-of-way, and the like, and even to begin construction work prior to the submission of this preliminary report to Congress.

Primary purpose of the development would be to manufacture power, which could be sold, leased or otherwise disposed of. These contracts would be subject to approval by the Federal Power Commission.

Christmas Just Another Day To Lifelong Derelict, 85, Here

William J. Jones, 85, whose Christmas will be at the Volunteers of America.

The old man with the thin gray beard was warm and drowsy as he sat slumped on a bench near the glow of a radiator in the Volunteers of America yesterday.

Christmas was approaching and the old man made a sentimental picture as he sat there, ragged and abandoned, with his dreams.

"He comes in every day and just sits," an adjutant explained. "Never talks to anyone—just sits and dreams."

There, thought the reporter, is just what we have been looking for. An old man deserted by his children, forgotten by his friends, dreaming of the happy yuletide days of yore.

The old man was a trifle deaf, which may have explained why he seemed so oblivious to the crowd around him, but he was eager to talk and he said his name was William J. Jones, 85.

"What's that, you say," asked the old man. "What do I think of Christmas? I don't think anything of Christmas, never have.

"Hey? My children? I ain't got no children. I'm a bachelor. Heh, heh, heh.

"I'm a little hard of hearing. On Christmas Day? Why I'll do just what I do every day—come around here and sit all day and then go back to the Salvation Army.

"Naw, I never celebrated Christmas. I've been on the bum ever since I was a kid. Naw, I can't even remember when I was a kid, now."

Desperately the reporter tried to save the story from complete collapse. Wasn't there anything Mr. Jones would like to have for a Christmas present. The old man shook his head, snuggled up against the radiator and sat back to await the passage of another day.

But ten minutes later the old man awakened from his dreams with a start and shuffled after the reporter. Timidly he plucked at a sleeve and said:

"I've just thought of something I'd like for a present."

Ah! Thought the reporter. Our talk has aroused some forgotten memory. The old man wants something that will bring back a moment of fleeting happiness from the obscurity of the past.

"I'd like a pair of warm woolen underdrawers," said the old man.

Mr. Jones is dean of the army of beaten men who daily beat a track from the soup line of the Volunteers to the dinner line at the Gospel Mission to the supper line at the Central Union Mission.

The Mission people told the reporter he had encountered the wrong types. There were, they said, many upright Christian gentlemen who walked the beaten path and who on Christmas Day would think and pray to Him who walked the earth in a humble role.

18,000 Chafe Over Fidelity Plans Delay

Depositors Disappointed as Loan Board Fails to Take Action.

Eighteen thousand depositors in the Fidelity Building & Loan Association received another disappointment yesterday after five months' waiting for the closed bank's affairs to be cleared up, in the announcement that the Federal Home Loan Board had been delayed in its survey of assets.

A Treasury official had previously announced that FHLB had actively begun a survey with a view to reopening the bank. Yesterday, however, FHLB declared it is being delayed on its survey because the Treasury has not yet completed its investigation of assets. FHLB will not act until the Treasury is finished.

Meanwhile depositors to the number of more than 300 have called at the office of Gibbs Lyons, Deputy Comptroller of the Treasury, asking an explanation of what the Treasury proposes to do with their impounded money.

Lyons has explained that the processes of examination of titles, liens and taxes on real estate on which the bank loaned money is a long and tedious process. Lyons has told them the bank had 1,000 such loans outstanding. Many of the loans were on property in Virginia and Maryland, where tax laws permit sale of tax certificates, which has complicated determination of whether taxes were actually paid up on property involved.

Fidelity has had two receivers since it was closed last July. The present receiver is James H. Nolan, who was appointed for the purpose of speeding up the receivership examinations in order that a plan for the bank's future might be resolved.

Until the investigation is completed no plan will be formed, the Treasury has stated. Thus, according to yesterday's declaraton at FHLB, it may be months before a plan is determined, and then many more months before the plan is put into effect, whether the plan be to close the bank and pay off so much on the dollar, or reopen it and try to continue its business.

"Magistrate Overton Harris," is the whisper at the Tavern, "whose complaint against that cop for making noise was dismissed—will be sued for $100,000. That cop will claim false arrest." . . . "A fine trained dog I got," Paul Sydell laments at the Paramount. "We play a benefit and the dog does all his stunts. Then we go to a place where they're paying us $250—and the dog won't budge." . . . "Tell me," Helene Standish asks Abe Lyman at the 18 Club, "have you ever considered playing in Carnegie Hall?" . . . "Naw," Lyman snickers, "who'd want to dance in Carnegie Hall?" . . . "This isn't the first time the British government refused Edward what he wanted," Cab Calloway tells Playwright Robert Sherwood. "When I played before him in London, the officials refused his request for dance music because our labor permit called for concerts only."

1 A. M.

Magistrate Jeanette Brill, at the premiere of Harold Stern's "Merry-Go-Round," looks at Judge Jacob Strahl, and warns: "You'd better stop blowing that noise-maker or we'll have Magistrate Harris on our necks." . . . Bobby Breen exits from Radio City Music Hall, after viewing two performances of his picture, "Rainbow on the River." . . . In the Roosevelt Grill, Playwright Melvin Levy discusses his newest play, "Fish." . . . "When are you going to produce it?" Jack Mills asks him. "Just as soon," Levy assures, "as I can get the 'Fish' and 'Chips' together" . . . Dick Stabile arrives, escorting his fiancee, Gracie Barrie. "I've been on his arm so long," Gracie states, "I feel like a vaccination."

2 A. M.

"Jessel and I flew in from the Coast," Herman Mankiewicz relates at the "21." "We're lousy fliers—so I got my doctor to give us sleeping pills. Well, we entered the plane and barely could keep our eyes open, we're so tired—but I tell George, 'Hey, we forgot to take the sleeping pills.' So we took the pills—and the gahdamn things kept us awake 22 hours!" . . . Ted Husing seats himself near the fireplace, studying his newest script. . . . Gordon S. Rentschler, president of the National City Bank, applauds Tamara's excellent song renditions at the Versailles. The banker then goes to retrieve his coat at the cloakroom, fumbles in his pocket and asks his companion, "Say—got a quarter?"

3 A. M.

At Bill's Gay Nineties, an Elkins, W. Va., visitor relates: "Marshall Goldberg's dad runs a movie house in our burg.. He tried to get the newsreels of the Notre Dame-Pitt game but couldn't. His rival theaters got them, though, and jammed 'em in by advertising: "See Biggie Goldberg Against Notre Dame!" . . . At Forty-sixth street and Broadway, the sightseeing bus hawkers render their "See Chinatown" spiel—to three wavering Japs . . . "Two Coney Island wax museums," Dave Schooler whispers at Ruby Foo's, "are working furiously, to be the first to finish a wax statue of Mrs. Simpson." . . . "Did you hear," an agent queries, "there's a movement starting to revive Harlem as a day night place. The old Cotton Club has been leased and will be called the 'Plantation.'" . . . "Mrs. Roosevelt's lecture-tour in Detroit was a flop, is the whisper at Longchamps. "The wealthy women there boycotted her and called her 'that woman.'"

4 A. M.

The Countess Dorothy di Frasso, wearing a quarter of a million dollars' worth of jewelery, exits from a swanky East Side cafe—and is hailed by members of the new Cabaret Squad . . . to see that she gets home safely . . . "Just got back from California," a Native Son tells Walter Duranty at Tony's. "A Court of Appeals Judge was just sent to jail there. He's still a judge, though, and draws his pay—because there's no law providing for automatic removal. If he wants to, he even can release fellow prisoners!"

5 A. M.

"Here's how it happened," Elliot Sperber describes at Reuben's. "Dick Merrill came out of his coop and told us: 'Put on your safety belts, we're gonna land. We sideswiped some trees—and then Dick saw this mountain thing ahead. He stood the plane upon its tail and pancaked it into the hill. That saved our lives.'" . . . Outside of Lindy's, eight tail-coated socialities whoop it up. "We were at the Raquet Club," one reports, "for the bachelor party to Angie Duke—who's marrying Priscilla St. George, F. D. R.'s kin. From there we all went straight to a taxi dance hall—the Orpheum."

Commentators on the Theater Have a Busy Day; Mrs. Roosevelt to Assist Mission Here Tomorrow

Miss Livingstone Comes to Town and Previews Break Out on All Sides Like Sparks From a Roman Candle; Christmas Day Just a Festival of Film Premieres; Those Cards Are a Source of Worry!

YESTERDAY was a busy day for those who jot down notes in their scrapbooks chronicling the annals of the theater in Washington.

To begin with, Beulah Livingstone was here and was tossed another luncheon in the handsome quarters of the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel by Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's.

BELL.

This merry business was heralded several days ago in a letter from Paul Gulick, director of publicity for Universal Pictures, Rockefeller Center, New York, in which it was said, in part: "With all of the new things that the New Universal is undertaking, I have fortunately found it possible to send a representative to see you personally and establish a closer contact between your office and mine. Miss Beulah Livingstone will be in Washington next week, will be stopping at the Willard and will phone you the minute she gets in."

Miss Livingstone did no such thing, but Master Meakin did. Owing to an emergency that could neither be foreseen nor evaded it was not possible for this reporter to be at his repast. I am sure that I'm sorrier than either Mr. Meakin or Miss Livingstone.

Screenings are coming along at breakneck speed these next few days, all in an effort on the part of the local exhibitors to make it easier for the drama desks on Christmas Day, when practically all of the pictures in town will open. Last night at 8:30 the Warner executives ran off "The Gold Diggers of 1937;" tonight at the same hour the Loew people are unwinding "Camille" and at 11:30 the Belasco is going to unspool "The Girl on the Front Page," starring Edmund Lowe—but not as the girl. It may be possible to unpack that stocking on Christmas morning, after all—if there is anything to unpack.

Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, wife of the President of the United States, will make her annual Yuletide visit to Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow morning, when the Central Union Mission will stage its yearly party for the underprivileged children of the District of Columbia.

The First Lady of the Land will personally pass out the first basket of Christmas cheer and thereafter will assist officials of the mission in their program of spreading happiness to those who otherwise would not have any at a time of year when this gracious state of mind points the whole meaning of one of the world's greatest festivals.

• • • •

If those Christmas cards I was bragging about seem to be a little late in arriving it may be because I haven't had a chance to mail them yet—what, with the Norman Pyles, the Carter Barrons, the Mr. and Mrs. Gene Ford and all the rest, who do so many lovely things at this time of year. But they'll be along. I hope.

"God's Country and the Woman," Warner Brothers' all-Technicolor production of one of the late James Curwood's most popular novels, will be the Earle Theater's first screen feature for 1937.

Booking of this picture, which costars George Brent and Beverly Roberts in the leading roles, was announced late yesterday by John J. Payette, Washington zone manager for the Warners. Herbert Mundin, screen comedian, and Little Jack Little and His Orchestra will co-headline the stage bill for the same week.

• • • •

That eminent accordionist, veteran showman and all-around good fellow, Orangello Ratto, of Loew's Palace Theater, where he is manager, by the way, in case you had not heard, yesterday also made an announcement. It was to the effect that he had contracted for nine of the foremost of the Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck cartoon comedies turned out by the Walt Disney Studio. They will be featured on the all-cartoon program at Loew's Palace this Saturday morning They are "Donald and Pluto," "Mickey's Moving Day," "Mickey's Circus," "Polo Team," "Orphan's Picnic," "Grand Opera," "Alpine Climbers," "Mickey's Service Station" and "Fire Brigade." A blanket admission charge of 25 cents will be assessed for all seats in the house. Doors will open at 9 a. m. and the performance will begin at 9:30.

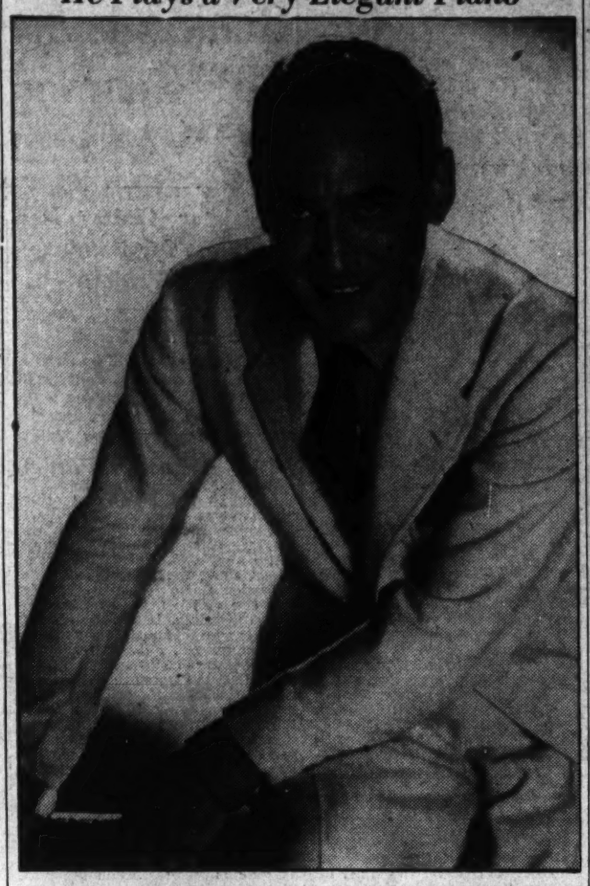
Never-Too-Late-to-Mend Note.

So now to addressing those Christmas cards. But where does one get the stamps, Christmas shopping being the financially devastating business that it is?

He Plays a Very Elegant Piano



Or perhaps the topline should say that "he plays a piano very elegantly." At any rate, this is a picture of Lee Sims, who does a double with Ilomay Bailey on the stage of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater, beginning on Christmas Day, and does do a splendid job of manhandling those ivories on the keyboard. This act is one of the best the varieties and radio have to offer.

U. S. Sailor Freed From Nazi Prison

Hamburg, Germany, Dec. 22 (AP). Lawrence B. Simpson, American seaman who spent 16½ months in a German prison for circulating communistic literature, was released today and handed over to American officials.

He was placed aboard the liner President Roosevelt to sail for the United States tomorrow.

Simpson was convicted in September. He recently sought a pardon through the United States Consulate General, apologizing for spreading communistic literature.

German officials explained December 1 he would be freed on a good-behavior basis, rather than pardoned.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, Dec. 22.

Bartering for real estate has become almost a game here. Take, for instance, Richard Arlen's experience. Seven years ago Dick entered into a prolonged harangue with a woman who owned a lot adjoining his home. Dick is a sharp bargainer, but so was the woman, and there was always a few hundred dollars' difference in price asked and price bid.

When prosperity was in fullest bloom, Arlen offered as much as $2,250. The woman asked $2,500. Boom, the crash; real estate prices flattened on rock bottom. Arlen lowered his bid to $1,000. The woman demanded $1,250.

After seven years of haggling Dick got the lot for a few dollars more than he wanted to pay, a few less than the owner had hoped to receive. I don't know which gave out of wind first.

Hal Roach, despite his many years as producer of "Our Gang" commedies, still has things to learn about kids. On eve of commencing work on a full length picture with youngsters, Hal decided to reward them with a fine new dressing-room bungalow. It was very swank; I am sure Jean Harlow or Joan Crawford would have grabbed the building with gusto. But not the kids. They stood glumly in a group, then went into a conference from which Spanky McFarland emerged as spokesman. "Aw gee, Mr. Roach," he complained, "we don't want a bungalow. We want a clubhouse like we had in our last picture." They got it; a rickety building that cost $40, while the $5,000 dressing quarters have apparently gone to waste.

Chuckle with me over Arline Judge's elegant retort to the physician who ordered six eggs in milk daily to build up her resistance. She chirped, "Who wants to resist!"

An amusing experience is this which befell Gene Autrey, whom they call the "singing cowboy." He had a prize sow on his ranch, and one dark night somebody made off with her. Had the thief taken Autrey's best horse, the actor could not have been more disturbed. He supplied the police with a detailed description and offered a fat reward. Then he was off on a personal appearance tour. Two days after his return a police "Black Maria" sirened into the ranch, and two perspiring cops dragged from the caged back end, Autrey's sow—and her litter of six pigs!

4-Story Fall Sends Worker to Hospital

Jack Kelly, 56-year-old carpenter, was ijured seriously yesterday when he fell four stories from a scaffold while working on a building at Twelfth and C streets southwest.

Fellow workmen told police the scaffold was being raised when one end tilted, throwing Kelly to the ground. He was taken t Casualty Hospital, where he was said to be suffering possible internal and head injuries.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher" Ely Culbertson says.

A Crystal Clear Message.

Certain forms of defense that require close partnership co-operation, depend for their effectiveness on brilliant, almost clairvoyant, deductions from clues that are barely perceptible. If an inexperienced or an inexpert player misses these clues, he is not greatly to be censured, but there is no excuse for failing to interpret the simplest message conveyed in terms that can have only one meaning—such a message as the West player sent in today's hand.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ Q J 9 8 ♡ 10 ◇ 10 9 5 ♣ A J 5 4
♠ 7 ♡ A 9 7 6 4 3 2 ◇ A 6 ♣ 9 7 2	West East North South	♠ K 10 8 5 4 ♡ K 8 5 ◇ 8 7 ♣ 8 6 3
	♠ A 3 2 ♡ Q J ◇ K Q J 3 2 ♣ K Q 10

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	1 ♡	3 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
Pass	Pass

North should have bid one spade instead of three diamonds. The opportunity to show a four-card major suit at a low level, rather than raise partner's minor suit bid, should be grasped whenever the responder's hand is merely reasonably strong, which is to say, not so strong that a game in partner's minor suit appears safe.

West selected the one opening lead that should have resulted in the defeat of the contract, but his partner's subsequent obtuseness spoiled everything. He led the spade seven, dummy played the Jack, East covered, and declarer's Ace won.

Declarer "smelled" that the lead might have been a singleton and attempted to get out a couple of rounds of trumps, by playing the Queen rather than the King of diamonds. But West hopped right up with the Ace, and, after a prolonged study of the dummy, made an inspired return—he underled his Ace seven times of hearts! East put up the King, and was quite dazed to find himself holding the trick. (He probably felt that declarer had forgotten to put the Ace on it). At any rate, determined to guard his tenace position in spades (10-8 over dummy's nine-spot) he craftily returned a trump, no doubt congratulating himself at exiting so cleverly. But it was all over! Declarer won and claimed the rest, since he could discard his only losing spade on dummy's fourth club.

West asked his partner, very gently, why he had not returned a spade, and East answered "How could I tell you I had a singleton?" West gulped and said nothing. He reflected that if his sequence of plays—first, leading a spade, second, jumping up with the Ace on the first lead of trumps, and, third, underplaying his long line of hearts to the Ace without the knowledge that his partner had the King, did not mark him with a singleton spade, nothing short of a telegram could have been effective.

* X WASHINGTON: WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1936 23

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

With Washington famous as the figure first in peace, first in war and last in the American League, it is rather startling to discover in the fine print of baseball's The Little Red Book that since 1912 Washington's record in the American League is second only to that of the Yankees.

POVICH.

In the 25 years since Clark Griffith has been at the helm of the Washington club, the Nats have never finished in last place, an honor shared only by New York and Detroit. Three times the Nats have won pennants, three times they have finished second, five times they have been third and only five times were they a second-division club.

The Nats' record is something of a testimonial to Clark Griffith, who, with the smallest bankroll in the league and operating in the smallest city in the majors, has been able to manipulate his talents shrewdly enough to give Washington what has amounted to the second-best representation in the American League in the last 25 years.

Griffith's current ball team is significant of the manner in which he has assembled pennant winners and first-division clubs at low costs while other richer owners were expending huge sums with no better, if as great, success. Only two players on the current edition of the Nats—Joe Kuhel and Buck Newsom—cost Griffith more than a few hundred dollars.

For Kuhel he paid $65,000 to the Kansas City team and for Newsom he paid $40,000 to the St. Louis Browns. Both have been practical, profitable investments. Either would bring their purchase price, and more, if placed on the market today.

His regular infield, with the exception of Kuhel, Griffith assembled at laughable cost. Second Baseman Buddy Myer, who developed into the champion batsman of the league and rates second only to Charley Gehringer, of the Tigers, in the field, Griffith bought for a paltry few thousand from New Orleans.

While other club owners were scouring the minors and offering huge sums to rival big league clubs for third basemen and shortstops, Griffith developed a pair of homebreds who are giving the Nats brilliant protection at a total cost equal to the car fare from Lewis' Gastonia, N. C., home to the Washington farm at Chattanooga.

Shortstop Cecil Travis represents one of the greatest bargains in the history of the majors. Joe Engel, the Washington scout, discovered him at a baseball school being conducted by Kid Elberfeld at Atlanta and agreed to pay Elberfeld $300 if Travis made good.

Washington's regular catcher—Cliff Bolton—was picked up from the sandlots at no cost whatsoever. Three years of seasoning in the minor leagues preceded his final plucking by the Nats.

The Nats' regular outfield of Chapman, Stone and Sington cost Griffith less than $1,000 cash if the cost is to be figured in cash. Chapman was gained in an even swap for Jake Powell who came to the Nats as a sandlotter; Stone was acquired in the Goslin trade, and Goslin was signed back in 1921 for $700 from the Columbia, S. C., club. Sington was bought from the Middle Atlantic League which commands no high purchase price.

In Short—

Jimmy DeShong, the Nats' leading pitcher, was obtained from the Yankees in an even trade for Bump Hadley whom Griffith signed from the sandlots . . . and Pete Appleton, the Nats' No. 2 pitcher, commanded only a $7,500 purchase price from Montreal . . . Monte Weaver bore a $25,000 price tag when bought from Baltimore, but he was a $25,000 pitcher when he helped the Nats to the pennant in 1933 . . . Griffith has never paid a nickel for a manager, promoting Clyde Milan, Donie Bush, Bucky Harris and Joe Cronin from the player's ranks . . . an interesting survey of Washington's population taken recently for national advertisers revealed that only 40 per cent of the Washingtonians are native born . . . of the remainder, 81 per cent hail from Southern States and 19 per cent from Northern States . . . the Detroit Tigers are the only club in either major league which never finished last . . . and the St. Louis Browns are the only team which never won the pennant . . . Connie Mack is hailed as one of the greatest managers of all time despite the fact that for six consecutive years, from 1915 to 1921, his teams finished last . . . the A's ascended to seventh place in 1922.

Psychology Important Item As Rose Bowl Rivals Prepare

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 22.—Psychology, the old bogey-man or friend, is working overtime as the rival teams of University of Washington and Univeristy of Pittsburgh get ready for their intersectional grid clash in the Rose Bowl January 1.

Word from neighboring training camps, Pitt at San Bernardino, and Washington at Santa Barbara, indicates that Coach Jimmy Phelan has the greater worry in whipping his Huskies into the proper frame of mind for the coming game.

Luckily for Jack Sutherland, the Pitt mentor, the Panthers seized the Rose Bowl invitation as a means of rebuking critics of past Pitt performances in the Pasadena Bowl. The team came out with the same mood that Stanford took into the Rose Bowl last New Year's Day—smarting under the recollection of defeats the previous two years at Pasadena and the things that were said about those games.

Huskies Let Down.

Washington, on the other hand, seemed to have a "let down" after being crowned 1936 Pacific Coast Conference champions and hailed as one of the Northwest's most powerful teams in years. The mental slump wasn't serious; the boys just forgot to think enough football.

Have not fear, however, that Mr. Phelan won't correct whatever light-heartedness or playful instincts the Huskies may have developed. Mr. Phelan has a way about him.

That was much in evidence today as the Huskies went through a long drill. There were no monkey-shines.

The Pitt training camp provided another kind of worry. Dr. Sutherland, glancing toward a hill overlooking the practice field, saw many people, all watching the Panthers work out. While he was certain there were no official Washington scouts among the group, he ordered a long canvas strip thrown up to screen his squad.

That done, he sent his charges through a spirited workout and promised harder work tomorrow.

Waldorf Tendered New Grid Contract

Chicago, Dec. 22 (AP).—Lynn Waldorf, head coach of the Northwestern University football team which won the Western Conference title with six straight victories, was signed to a new five-year contract today.

The announcement was made by Kenneth L. (Tug) Wilson, Northwestern director of athletics.

Waldorf, who starred as a tackle at Syracuse in 1925 and was a successful grid coach for nine years in the Southwest, became head football coach at Northwestern in 1935. That fall his Wildcats, playing a schedule generally recognized as one of the hardest of any major eleven in the Nation, lost three of their first four games and came back to tie Iowa and defeat Illinois, Notre Dame and Wisconsin in the final four games of the season.

Hungry Howard Team Even Misses Banquet

No banquet will be served the Bison squad of Howard University this year, as has been the custom in previous years, because of their failure to complete the season on the gridiron, following their strike at the Union game, principally to improve conditions under which their members were eating.

Awarding of the "H," an annual banquet feature, will also fail to take place, and election of a captain for the ensuing year will be indefinitely postponed. Announcement of decision in these matters by the board of athletic control was made to the team yesterday by John Burr, of the department of physical education.

Clipper Smith May Leave Duquesne

Judge Steffen Reported Ready to Quit at Carnegie Tech.

'Duke's' Coach Received Big Ten Offer But Refuses Comment.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 22.—Sporting circles buzzed tonight with reports Pittsburgh may lose two of its three "major league" football coaches, including the "Little Clipper" from Notre Dame, who led Duquesne to upset triumphs over Pitt and Marquette.

John Philip Smith, the Duke's coach, declared he was too busy preparing his boys for their Orange Bowl assignment against Mississippi State to talk about the matter.

But the erstwhile star guard, who left Notre Dame in 1929 and started coaching at Trinity, is known to have refused to sign a one-year contract tendered him before the Pitt game.

The reports were he had three definite offers, one from a Big Ten Conference school. Before coming to Duquesne Smith coached at North Carolina State, Newark Academy and Georgetown.

Judge Walter P. Steffen, of Chicago, returned last fall to help his alma mater, Carnegie Tech, clear up a muddled coaching situation, with the student body then clamoring for a change.

The judge is understood to have informed the Tech authorities he doesn't think the plan of serving part time away from his bench duties will work out and to have suggested an entirely new set-up, with a well-established coach, who may pick his own staff of assistants.

Howard Harpster has been head coach at Tech for several seasons. Duquesne won seven games this year, dropped contests to West Virginia Wesleyan and Detroit. Carnegie Tech beat Temple and New York University, lost six.

The University of Pittsburgh undoubtedly will stand pat with Dr. John Bane (Jock) Sutherland, now in California with his team for a Rose Bowl tussle against Washington.

Gil Dobie Will Spend Christmas at Home

Boston, Dec. 22 (AP).—Gilmour (Gloomy Gil) Dobie, 57-year-old Boston College football coach, received a Christmas gift tonight from doctors at Boston City Hospital—Notice he could spend Christmas at home with his family.

Dobie, with his assistant, Frank Murdock, suffered severe injuries early in the morning of December 2, when his automobile struck a railroad bridge abutment in the Back Bay. Since then both have been confined in the hospital. Murdock, doctors said tonight, could not be released for at least three weeks.

Facilities were furnished by Western Union for transference of press copy to branches outside the track at the Miami Biltmore Hotel and Coral Gables.

Yuletide Is Here And Brother Cuddy Presents a Few

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

New York, Dec. 22.—Thursday is Christmas Eve, and, of course, I must don the red suit and white whiskers and go galivanting hither and yon distributing Yuletide presents.

I have been busier than a three-pawed beaver arranging my little tokens for distribution. Right now they are spread all over the floors of my four-room Bronx estate. Perhaps you would be interested in taking a peek at some of these gifts.

For example, look in that fruit jar there. What is it? Why, that's a heart, a human heart. I am giving that to Big Ray Impellettierre. Remember Ray? He is the giant pugilist who was knocked out the other evening by little Bob Pastor. I believe Ray could use a heart more than anything else.

And there, in another fruit jar, is a bunch of brains. I am giving these brains to the University of Washington officials who picked Pittsburgh to play the Huskies in the Rose Bowl. I'm quite certain those brains could be used by the brass hats in the Seattle institution.

See this little trinket here. No—it is not merely two "X" 's made of wood. It's what we call the "double cross." I had this one carved out of mahogany at considerable expense because it is going to a very important fellow. I refer to Herr Max Schmeling. I am positive Maxie will appreciate this gift more than anything else because he must have exhausted all of his double-crosses. You know, giving them to Paul Gallico, Joe Jacobs, etc. And he will need this one for the New York Boxing Commission shortly, if Maxie's plans to shift the Braddock bout to Berlin are carried out.

That long plank there? Well—that's really not a plank. That's a springboard. I had that made for Maxie Baer. I understand he is planning another comeback. His opponents will find this board very useful. Yes—that's another springboard over there. That's for Jack Sharkey. I'm not certain that he will come back, but I'm giving it to him just in case.

You will note that in this group photograph here, the faces of the three men have been left blank. I am sending this picture to the Brooklyn Dodgers. The faces can be filled in later. It is a photograph called "Our New Owners." And I'm certain it is most apropos. Boy! Do they need new owners over there? ! ! !

This little bottle here? No, it's not perfume. It is a bottle of imaginary lotion for treating imaginary arthritis. Yep, that's going to Champion James J. Braddock.

Dukes Go Indoors For Bowl Workout

Pittsburgh, Dec. 22 (AP).—Duquesne University's football team, hunting a place for practice for its Orange Bowl game New Year's Day moved into a big county fair building today.

The Duke's field was covered with snow, driving them indoors to get ready for Mississippi State at Miami, Fla., next week.

Coach John (Little Clipper) Smith tried practice in the Duquesne gymnasium yesterday but found his players were cramped for room.

He got permission to take the team to South Park for a workout in a hall used for agricultural exhibits during the summer.

Harlow Is Wanted To Stage Tourney

St. Petersburg, Fla., Dec. 22 (AP).—The sports committee for the St. Petersburg Chamber of Commerce announced plans today for a $3,000 open four-ball golf tournament here "provided that Mr. Robert E. Harlow contact the players and obtain their entries."

Harlow recently was dismssed as manager of the Professional Golfers Association tournament bureau.

Not Engaged to Sonja Says Tyronne Power, jr.

Cincinnati, Dec. 22 (AP).—Tyronne Power, jr., young motion picture actor, arrived in Cincinnati today to spend Christmas with his family, and promptly denied reports that he was engaged to Sonja Henie, the Norwegian skating champion who recently entered the movies.

"There is no basis for any such story," he said. "I am not engaged to Miss Henie or anyone else. We are fellow associates at the same studio and, like other friends in the film colony, meet frequently, both professionally and in personal social circles."

Braddock's Exhibition Engagement Postponed

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 22 (AP).—Jimmy Braddock's four-round bout here with Jack McCarthy, of Boston, which had been scheduled for next Monday, has been postponed until some time in January, Promoter Charley Murray announced today.

The engagement has been listed as the first of a number of tune-up exhibitions for Braddock before he meets Max Schmeling to defend his heavyweight championship, June 3.

Mack, 74 Today, Yearns for Flag . . .

54 Years in Game, He Hopes Not to Sell Another Man

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

His seventy-fourth birthday finds Connie Mack on the job in his office, surrounded by the trophies and memories of his 54 years in baseball and partaking of crackers and milk for his lunch.

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Philadelphia, Dec. 22.—At the age when most men, great or small, shut themselves up in blissful reverie, Connie Mack marches on.

The lean leader of the Philadelphia Athletics will be 74 years old tomorrow. Soon he'll be starting his fifty-fourth year in baseball. The pages of his crystallic mind are filled with memories, some happy and many sad.

And yet, as his steel blue eyes sweep across the landscape of his achievements, he lives and thinks only in the future. He won't get out of step with time if he can help it.

"If I could have but one wish," he said a bit sadly, "it would be a wish that never again would I have to sell another ball player. And, maybe, I'll get my wish. If I can help it I'll never sell another first class player to another club. If I can keep such a wish—and I think I can—I believe I will be able to deliver at least another pennant winner to Philadelphia before . . ."

"Before what, Mr. Mack?" we asked. "Before you quit?"

"Before I quit, yes," he smiled. "But I don't intend to quit managing the Athletics until someone convinces me I'm not able to manage it successfully. And I hope when that time comes that I'll be the first to know it. Darn it, I think I've got some of my best years left."

To look at the oldest active man in baseball, you'd think he had at least 25 years left. It is true you can see he's an old man. His head seems to shake a little when he talks. But you'll say Connie Mack has more time than he needs to climb back on top of the baseball world as manager of the World Champions. Erect and active, Connie has more vitality left in 150 pounds, spread over his 6 foot 1 inch frame, than the average man of 40.

Sale of ball players was on his mind today as he accepted early congratulations on nearing his seventy-fourth milestone. So, he talked on.

"You know it hurt me more than anything else to have people think that I was something like a robber in selling players for big sums like I did Cramer, Foxx, McNair and Marcum to the Red Sox," he said sadly. "But it was a business deal. I didn't want to sell them—never wanted to sell any player—but I have to have money to go on with the game I've spent all these years with. It hurt me just as much as it hurt Yawkey (owner Tom Yawkey of the Red Sox) when the players I sold him failed to win the pennant. Most of all Marcum. I thought he'd win 20 or 25 games for Tom and I was bitterly disappointed in him. But I'll tell you one thing, no one can buy those players from Tom today. I wish I had the money so I could buy all of them and then release them."

Connie doesn't pose as a baseball humanitarian. Such a statement is hard to believe, but the way he said it made us believe it was so.

For 1937, Connie, who revealed that he himself shortened his name from Cornelius McGillicuddy to Connie Mack years ago, doesn't expect much.

"My job now is to round out a pitching staff," he reasoned happily. "When I get that, the rest of the job will be easy. It'll be hard moving the Yankees around next year."

Backtracking, he named the Baltimore Orioles of 1894 to '96, the Chicago Cubs of 1906 to '10, and his own Athletics of 1910 to '14 as the three greatest ball clubs he ever saw.

"I think the greatest of these was my club of 1912," he stated with a wry smile. "That club finished third, too, because it dissipated too much. I think it had more ability and class than any team baseball ever knew."

Sports Boomed In 1936 Poll Discloses

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Emerging full-sized from the depression doldrums, sport in general is riding the crest of a new boom wave in the opinion of national experts participating in the sixth annual Associated Press Sports Poll.

The bigger crowds and larger receipts for horse and auto racing, football and baseball and the movement toward "more open and honest handling of the problems of subsidizing and recruiting" in college football were among the important trends of 1936 emphasized by veteran observers.

The turnout of 62,000 spectators for the Kentucky Derby; 168,000 for the Indianapolis Memorial Day 500-mile auto race; 64,417 for an early September doubleheader between the New York Giants and the St. Louis Cardinals; 66,669 for the fourth game of the World Series in Yankee Stadium; 48,000 at Baton Rouge for the Louisiana State-Tulane football game, and 105,000 at Philadelphia for the Army-Navy grid classic were cited as the high marks of the year.

Growth of professional football; the permitting of night baseball in both major leagues, and increased interest in minor league baseball were among the other high-spot trends, as shown by the poll, follows:

Trends.	Votes.
1. Bigger crowds and "gates" in all sports	22
2. More "open and honest" handling of college football subsidies	14
3. More open style of college football play, notably in Midwest	9
4. Growth of professional football	8
5. Growth of night baseball, now permitted in both major leagues	7
6. Greater interest in pro baseball, especially in minor leagues	6
7. Return of Eastern "Ivy" teams to football power	6
8. Shift of leading amateurs to pro ranks in many sports	5
9. Increase in horse-race betting, growth of football gambling, greater interest in winter sports, and better sectional balance of college football power, 4 each

Scattered votes—Three each for "over-emphasis of nationalism in Olympics" and growth of softball competition; 2 each for decline of college football, "breathers," growth of commercialized college sports broadcasts, prominence of Negro athletes and agitation against stymie in golf.

Owens Is Voted Best Athlete In Big Ten

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Jesse Owens, elected the Nation's outstanding athlete for 1936, carried his home precinct, the Big Ten, by a landslide vote.

The spectacular Ohio State Negro, triple Olympic champion, world record holder and a tonic to attendance figures at track and field meets in which he displayed his amazing talents, made the fourth annual Associated Press Big Ten outstanding athlete poll a mere formality.

He rolled up 128 points, on the basis of 3 points for first choice, 2 for second and 1 for third, to outdistance his field, much as he did in foot racing and broad jumping. He was the first choice of 42 out of 49 Midwestern sports experts, and landed one second place vote. Four voted only for Owens, while six rugged individualists failed to mention him.

The place and show positions went to Vernon Huffman, Indiana University's football and basketball star, and Big Ed Widseth, Minnesota's all American tackle. Huffman, who won three of the six first choice votes not credited to the Owens column, was runner-up with 55 points. Widseth, gaining his support in seconds and thirds, had 23.

Owens, whose flashing spikes and big smile are no longer a part of the amateur sports picture, finished second in last year's poll behind John Jacob ("Jay") Berwanger, Chicago's great football hero. Berwanger also won the honors in 1934. Duane Purvis, Purdue football and track star, was the choice in 1933, the first year of the poll.

Huffman, who will pass up professional football gold to become a member of the Indiana coaching staff, was the second choice of 19 observers, and received eight third-place votes. Widseth, also aiming at coaching rather than pro football, gained seven second places and nine thirds.

Steeplechase Boom in U.S. Objective

Uniform Horse Quality, Bigger Purses May Add to Interest.

Participants Will Draw Lots to Distribute Horses Bought.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 22.—Thirty-six men and women, leaving the success of their investment to the luck of the draw, have pooled $90,000 in an effort to popularize steeplechase racing in this country.

Realizing that the sport needs larger and better-balanced fields, the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association today announced the formation of a syndicate to bring 36 proved jumpers from France with each subscriber paying $2,500. Ownership of the horses will be determined by lot on their arrival in New York early next month.

The venture, first of its kind since 1924, will bring to this country 3 to 6 year old jumpers of uniform ability which have been purchased by the Marquis de Saint-Sauveur, Lord Derby's agent in France and outstanding European authority on breeding. Formation of the syndicate was in charge of a committee consisting of Harold Talbott, A. C. Bostwick and F. S. Von Stade.

Records Unknown.

Breeders and records of the horses will be unknown to the subscribers until they meet at Belmont Park, January 10, at which time the drawings will be made. The horses are expected to arrive a week earlier in the S. S. American Farmer.

Such part of the fund not expended in the purchase and shipment of the jumpers will be used to increase the value of purses which will be offered by the Belmont Park, Saratoga and Aqueduct associations to the subscription horses. The fund is expected to be close to $15,000 with two such races scheduled for each of the three New York tracks conducting steeplechase racing.

The horses also will be eligible for all hunt meetings, including the Maryland Cup, America's counterpart of the Grand National.

"We expect this to boom steeplechase racing in this country," said Henry W. Bull, president of the association. "It not only will bring new blood into the sport, but will furnish an incentive for other sportsmen to enter their horses in events other than at hunt meetings."

"The racing associations have promised there will be no race with a value of less than $1,200, except in selling events, while stakes will be for $2,000 or more. It also should result in much more attractive races for the bettors, for it will do away with two or three platers opposing a top-notch performer."

The subscribers include George H. (Pete) Bostwick, James Butler, Mr. and Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark, Stephen C. Clark, jr., Victor Emanuel, Thomas Hitchcock, sr., Mrs. Vadim Makaroff, W. B. Ruthrauff, A. G. C. Sage, Henry W. Sage, John Schiff, Evander B. Schley, Mrs. Dodge Sloane, Louis E. Stoddard, jr., Harold Talbott, Alvin Untermyer, Mr. and Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Mrs. Payne Whitney, Joseph E. Widener and Mrs. Robert Winthrop, all of New York.

J. Frederic Byers, Pittsburgh; William du Pont, jr., Wilmington, Del.; Mrs. Grace H. Eustis and Alexander Hagner, Warrenton, Va.; Deering Howe, J. W. T. Martin and Dr. Walter Wickes, Baltimore; Ernest L. Woodward, Camden, S. C.; Bayard Warren and John R. Macomber, Boston; George D. Widener and Campbell Weie, Philadelphia; the Raritan Stable, owned by James Cox Brady and Reeve Schley, Bernardsville, N. J., and George L. Ohrstrom, Greenwich.

One Share of Card Stock Paying $12

St. Louis, Dec. 22 (AP).—Dividend checks amounting to $12 for each share they own were in the mails today to stockholders of the St. Louis Cardinals. Last year the baseball club paid $10 a share.

Sam Breadon, president and owner of 76 per cent of the stock, said the dividend represented a payment of about 6 per cent on the value of the stock. This would indicate each share with an original par value of $25 now has a market value of about $200.

The $2 extra payment this year did not necessarily mean the Cardinals earned more in 1936 than they did in 1935, Breadon said, explaining the new Federal undivided surplus tax act was a factor in the increase.

Mixwell, New England Horse, Wins Feature at Tropical Park

Great Haste's Bid Proves Futile.

Deering's Hard Urging Is Deciding Factor; Dnieper Victor.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 22 (AP).—Mixwell, 3-year-old gelded son of Misstep, captured top honors in the Delray Handicap, a 6-furlong dash for Class "C" 3-year-olds and upward here this afternoon. The New England invader, third in his local debut, had the speed to outrun seven rivals today and, under Jockey Johnny Deering's hard urging, drove home first by a length. He was the first favorite to register, paying $4.60 for $2. His time was 1:12 flat.

Great Haste, in the colors of Miss A. Doris, gained the place by a half length under Silvio Coucci. Third money went to J. F. Letendre's Furfiber. Fidelis, Vote Boy, Miss Moana, Wise Duke and Clocks brought up the rear as named.

Vote Boy was fastest away from the gate in a good start. The gelding was unable to gain a clear advantage, for Deering sent Mixwell right after him and the pair raced head-and-head to the far turn, plenty of daylight in advance of the others. Coucci had Great Haste closest on their trail. Mixwell began to ease away from Vote Boy as they circled the final bend. Vote Boy then faded rapidly as Great Haste set sail for Mixwell. The latter held his ground well in the drive to the wire, while Great Haste was hard pushed to stave off the slow starting Furfiber for the place award.

Pauldron Shows Class.

Pauldron, a chestnut daughter of Polydor, showed some of the speed of her sire when she easily outran a band of maiden 2-year-olds in the 5½ furlongs of the initial contest. Nick Wall broke the fleet miss on top of the bunch and she dashed far clear of her field to register by three lengths at $19.10 for $2. Marfeu, again heavily backed, again failed. He raced forwardly and was an easy second, four lengths better than the even running Tallyrand.

A dozen sprinters of the cheaper plater ranks competed in the second. The winner turned up in the $15.40 for $2 hazard Tramway, which romped home by two lengths under Apprentice Bierman. Amqui was second by almost as wide a margin over Stipulate, one that may do better over a distance of ground. Amqui disposed of the fast-starting Chance Queen after a brief duel, then had Tramway to contend with in the important running. Tramway easily ran over his rival in the stretch to win going away.

Al Carlys Wins.

Another good-priced winner developed in the third race. Al Carlys just got up on the outside to score in a photo finish with Royal Flight. Royal Shoot, the favorite, tossed off an early lead and wound up third, ten lengths away. Both the first and second horses were in early difficulties, especially Royal Flight, which was messed up at the break and slow to get away. Al Carlys, after a fast start, was pinched back, but remained within range of the pace. Royal Flight caught Royal Shoot after a half mile and just failed to last when Al Carlys made his dying bid. The victor returned $14.70.

Mose Goldblatt's Dnieper, a cast-off of Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's Stable, made a successful winter debut in the one-mile Redland Purse for 3-year-olds that was fifth on the program. The gelded son of Kiev, which changed hands in midsummer, was making his first start in the all-white Goldblatt silks. He was last away in the five-horse field, but George South rushed the chestnut into the lead on the backstretch and rode him out to win by a length and a half. Hose took an early lead, dropped out of it, then came again and was second by two lengths over Couleedam. Dnieper paid $10.60.

Hirsch Jacobs had Mama's Choice in a real running mood for the sixth event. The 6-year-old brown mare fairly flew the one mile in 1:38 1-5, easily the fastest eight furlongs of the meeting. Favorite at $5.10 for $2, Mama's Choice made all her own pace and won by three lengths under Irving Anderson, giving her trainer his 174th victory of the year. Count Rae easily accounted for second money, holding four lengths' advantage over the sluggish-starting Mr. Bun.

Thirteen Stars was dropped down in softer company and won the seventh race in hollow fashion by four lengths. Watch Him was almost as easily second, with The Singer, an outsider, third. The talent went down hard on the Jacobs' plater. Tell Why, which was unable to get to the front and finished in front of one horse. Thirteen Stars lacked early foot, but ran over horses when in stride and, catching the pacemaker, Watch Him, at the entrance to the stretch, drew away as if much the best, paying $9.20.

Louisville Track Gets $50,000 Improvements

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 22 (AP).—Col. Matt J. Winn, executive director of Churchill Downs, announced today that at least $50,000 would be spent for improvements at the racing plant before the 1937 spring meeting. He said enlarged facilities would be required for a record crowd at the Kentucky Derby May 8.

For the convenience of grandstand box holders, Winn said a second-floor lounge, cocktail bar and betting shed will be constructed on the second-floor level overlooking the paddock.

Johnny Longden Signs With Wheatley Stable

Tropical Park, Fla., Dec. 22 (AP).—Johnny Longden, who stands second in the American jockey race, has agreed to do the riding for the Wheatley Stable in 1937, Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, veteran trainer, says Longden will report to him at Aqueduct March 1. Longden is pushing Basil James hard for the leadership in the national standing. Longden is due to arrive in Miami some time in February and may accept some mounts in the Wheatley Stable colors.

AL CARLYS broke good but was crowded back just after the start, recovered, then was sent up on inside and entering stretch, came around ROYAL FLIGHT and closing with a rush, was going away at end. ROYAL FLIGHT was probably best, but got away in a tangle, made up ground with a rush, assumed lead in stretch and held on gamely. ROYAL SHOOT set pace for half a mile then quit badly. MY GOODNESS, well up all the way. TWOSOME closed a big gap. CLEAN HEELS had speed for half a mile.

MIXWELL, well ridden, followed VOTE BOY to the middle of the turn, then took lead and held on gamely. GREAT HASTE was a stout contender all the way and closed fast under a good strong ride. FURFIBER, unable to get into his stride until the last three furlongs, finished fast. FIDELIS came very fast at end. VOTE BOY had plenty of speed, but stopped to a walk in last furlong. MISS MONOA had no mishap. CLOCKS was outrun.

Time Out!

By Chet Smith

To heck with him—I ain't draggin' that thing back—I'm a bird dog!

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Selections at Tropical Park.

Dear Al:

Word comes from Florida to the effect that the Waite Camera in use there has been doing a good job. When the photo called Sam Worthy the winner over M. J. Brennan it marked the first time that the grandstand and press-box judges had disagreed with the camera. Mr. Waite has been working on his camera during the summer and fall and says he will soon be able to give the judges a picture of the finish before the horses return to the stand. Mike wires that Jockey Silvio Coucci was a happy boy after he brought Treasure Ship home a winner for us. The one-time star rider for the Greentree Stable believes he has beaten the jinx. Coucci's fine ride brought him a job, too. Trainer Harvey L. Campbell took a call on his services after waiting for the Brooklyn Italian to dress. Jockey M. Vassar has left the hospital after an attack of double pneumonia. He hopes to get back in the saddle before the horses leave Florida. The dime department of Bennings, Inc., did a good business yesterday. Sixty persons mailed or brought in dimes which were turned over to The Post Toy Fund. That puts the total over the 500 mark. Thanks, people. All Benningites and friends (or enemies, if such there be) of this column will want to start "Bred to Run," a Black Beauty story of a race horse, beginning Friday morning in The Post.

BILL.

First Race—Baydrop seems well suited by conditions in this event. R. Watson will do the booting and I'm going to string along. Moretide has been working well and should be a keen factor. Uppercut to take care of the others.

Second race—The Mrs. E. D. Jacobs entry looks as if it has a lock and key on the chief award in this field. Jub Jub and Star Loom are both capable juveniles and I'm anticipating no mistakes. Touche is better than that last, but I don't believe he can handle the top pair. Dickery Dock may get into the money circle.

Third race—Die Hard must carry 116 pounds for this. I would like to see him in lighter, but he deserves the top selection anyway. Dixie Princess is stepping up, but she is far too fit to be disregarded. Dark War has a fighting chance.

Fourth race—Zinnia, according to Clocker Mike, has made some good moves at this track. Not a sure thing by any means, but one that may step down at good odds. Ned Storm looms as the one to beat. Golden Seal for the show money.

Fifth race—The Runner and Merry Mood probably will battle it out for this purse. Both are fit and ready and seem to have an edge on the others. The entry of Fire Finch and Lina's Son is formidable.

Sixth race—Night Raven, with Anderson to do the booting, should take care of a field of this sort. Likes the route and I'm expecting a win. Indian Head and Miss Twinkle for the place and show positions.

Seventh race—Knight's Fancy has been showing little of late and is due to awake with a bang. I'm trying to make today the day. Spartan Lady's last was not her race. Langorous may get into the money.

Eighth race—Spicy, a winner in Maryland, promises to do a lot of running in this company. Joe Renick will do the riding. Joan Asbestos turned in a neat second the other day. Geologist for the show and all of it if the first two make mistakes.

Best bet—The Runner.

1—Laura S., Transit Lady, Brother Newt.
2—Jacobs entry, Rafter, Touche.
3—Narise, Die Hard, Flavor.
4—Ned Storm, Foxy Locksy, Atta Knight.
5—Tap On, Casinghead, The Runner.
6—Night Raven, Speed, McMitchell entry.
7—Lady Marnock, Spartan Lady, Vitofel.
8—Geologist, Joan Asbestos, Candlelight.
Best bet—Night Raven.

Alumnus to Aid Hunk Anderson Fight Dismissal by N. C. State

Dr. Graham's Authority Is Challenged

Court Fight Seen as Dave Clark Comes to Aid of Ousted Coach.

United Press Staff Correspondent.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 22.—The Graham plan, Simon-pure code for athletes of the Southern conference, faced what may prove to be a final showdown tonight in the controversy growing out of dismissal of Heartly (Hunk) Anderson, head football coach at North Carolina State College.

Dr. Frank Porter Graham, young dynamic president of the University of North Carolina, of which State College is a unit, projected himself squarely into the battle when after a conference with Dean J. W. Harrelson, of State, he announced that Anderson "would not fit" in the revised State athletic setup and would not be retained.

Graham is author of the plan which bears his name, adopted a year ago by the 16-school Southern conference to eliminate subsidization of athletes and "de-emphasize" football. The plan provides that university presidents shall have the final word in the hiring and firing of football coaches at each school in the conference.

Challenge to Graham's authority to dismiss Anderson, and by inference the validity of the Graham plan, came first from Dave Clark, Charlotte alumnus of State College. In a statement close on heels of Anderson's dismissal, Clark called Graham's action "high-handed and illegal" and announced his lawyers would begin an immediate investigation.

Western Five Winner Over Alumni

In a top-speed, overtime battle, Western High turned back the Western High alumni, 35-33, yesterday on the high school court in the annual game between the student five and the grads. The high school avenged the defeat suffered at the hands of the alumni last year, Hop Lomax, captain and guard, scoring the winning basket in the extra period after the regular playing time ended with the count 33-33.

Joe Brennan, George Washington University star, was high scorer with 17 points and almost single-handed kept the grads in the running after the high school had taken an 8-2 lead in the first quarter.

Sport Writers Bowl Today In Travesty

The Lucky Strike duckpin plant will resound with squeaking joints, wailing alibis and maybe a couple of falling pins this afternoon when the local sports writers, radio announcers and a cartoonist gallop down the runways in an effort to win the R. Harris & Co. trophy and the newspaper championship.

The tourney, which promises to be somewhat of a frolic, will be rolled in conjunction with the Evening Star Yuletide Tournament. Abe Povich, of The Post, will bowl from scratch.

As has been the case in all previous rollings, the scribes will be the guests of Bill Wood, superintendent of the Lucky Strike alleys.

Donnie Hopper, youthful star of the Premier Cab Association team, showed his heels to the veterans in the Columbia Heights League last night by smacking the maples for a 140 game to give the Cabmen their only win over the league-leading Cools Fountain team. Sig Solem collected a high set of 386, which enabled Arcade Sunshine Laundry to take the odd game from C. & C. Restaurant.

Other league results were Vincent Barbers, two wins over Hessick Coal, in which the Barbers annexed top game and set laurels with 621 and 1,733, respectively, and Arcadia's whitewash of Ben Hundley Tire Co. The Hertz Drivurself and Eagle Bedding Co. match was postponed.

Ambers to London.

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Al Weill, manager of Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers, said tonight he wanted a $35,000 guarantee for a title fight in London between Ambers and Jimmy Walsh.

President's Son Competes in Fort Myer Show

John Roosevelt, youngest son of the President, pictured with Mrs. Lawrence W. (Chip) Robert last night at the Fort Myer Riding Hall where both competed. They are awaiting their turns in the Working Hunters class. Mrs. Robert is riding her favorite mount, John the Baptist.

Clipped Wings Leads Indoor Horse Show

With Fenton Fadeley's Lacquer Lady and Lieut. Frank S. Henry's Clipped Wings vying for honors toward the indoor championship, the Fort Myer winter horse show series opened last night before a good-sized crowd.

Lacquer Lady, with Fadeley up, took blue ribbons in both the touch and out and in the working hunter class, performing smoothly in both events. Clipped Wings took a second in the open jumping class, a third in the touch and out and then came through with a blue ribbon in the last event, the handy jumpers class.

John Roosevelt, riding Mrs. Roosevelt's Dotty, failed to score in the road hack event and was ruled out of the working hunter class when his horse Badger balked three times at the fence jump.

The Fritz Kleman entries placed one and two in the class for green jumpers. Kleman's Lady Huntmere, with James Marsh up, placed first, and his So Long, also ridden by Marsh, was awarded second place.

Class 1 (jumping for enlisted men)—First, Sergt. Marvin Avery, on Rolfe; second, Sergt. William Toston, on Rusty; third, Private James McDaniel, on Highball; fourth, Corpl. William Bern, on Saddlebags.

Eastern Five Comes Close To Defeat

Quint Barely Noses Out St. John's to Keep Clean Record.

Only a few seconds separated Eastern High last night from the first defeat it has suffered on its own court at the hands of a school team since 1931. The inter-high champs finally came through in two extra periods to defeat St. John's High, Catholic Prep school champions, 25-21, after trailing 22-21 with five seconds to play.

An over-anxious St. John's guard, Joey Gallagher, fouled Chick Colley just before the final whistle blew and Colley sank the free shot to tie the score 21-21 at the end of the regular playing time.

A capacity crowd packed the Eastern gym to see the double-header in which the Eastern Alumni handed a 45-37 defeat to the Central High Alumni in the opener. Both games were top-notch performances from the spectators' point of view with Don Fones, last year's all-high ace from Central, stealing the individual honors.

The nightcap, however, unexpectedly stole the show. St. John's, garbed in blazing red uniforms, streaked around the court to outplay the inter-high title-holders virtually from the start. Clint Quantrille scored the only basket in the first quarter to give Eastern a 2-0 lead, but St. John's, led by Johnny Swagart, all-Prep forward, swung into an 11-5 lead in the second quarter.

The Cadets were still leading as the final quarter opened, 17 to 13, but Eastern took an 18-to-17 lead, largely through the flashy play of Carroll Colton, a fast little forward. Swagart gave St. John's a 20-to-19 lead, but Lombardy put Eastern ahead, 21 to 20. Swagart followed with another basket, and the prep schools boys led, 22 to 21, with 15 seconds to play.

With a few seconds left, Gallagher fouled Colley and the game was over before he could shoot it. The big Easterner calmly sank it though as the crowd started to file out, and a three-minute extra period began. Howard Hancock, of Eastern, missed a foul, nobody else scored, and a second extra period was necessary.

Hancock came through in this period, to make it 23 to 21, and with some 45 seconds to play Colton added another, for 25 to 21. Eastern was freezing the ball and the Johnnies were unable to again take control of the situation.

Santa Claus' Helpers Drafted From Sport World

Schoolboys Give U. S. Mailmen Helping Hand During Holidays

By John R. Vosburgh.

Hand in hand with Santa Claus and Uncle Sam, an All-Star crew of District athletes is slaving daily at the main Postoffice. From Georgetown, Central High, Maryland, Notre Dame and sundry other schools they have turned out to give their time and labor to see that you get your Chrismas cards and presents without a hitch.

Of course, the mere fact they are paid 65 cents an hour (72 cents at night) is possibly a coincidence—or is it? At any rate, Postmaster General Jim Farley could form a Postoffice A. C. right now which could hold its own in most athletic circles of merit.

There are almost as many athletes in the Postoffice sorting and distribution departments as there are Christmas presents and the latter are all over the place. In fact, there seems extreme danger of some halfback getting his signals crossed, falling in the parcels post chute and finding himself delivered as a Christmas present.

Giving added prestige to the players' company is Mush Dubofsky, the Georgetown line coach, who is so hard to find that even the officials aren't sure where he is. At one time yesterday he was reported to be wrestling with some hefty out-going packages but he must have done a Notre Dame shift to some other department by the time The Post photographer got down there.

Allegedly through the Dubofsky influence, a number of Georgetown athletes have signed up for a short workout with Uncle Sam. Red Hardy, the All-District center; Fred Tehaan, the stocky little Hoya guard, and Bob Nolan, the very able backfield star of the Hilltoppers were among those present yesterday.

From Maryland, Knocky Thomas, Johnny Gormley, Bucky Buscher and Waverly Wheeler were conspicuous and several George Washington athletes were wandering around the place, including Ray Hanken and a few others unfamiliar to your correspondent but wearing the buff and blue prominently.

Most of Central High's basketball team is shooting baskets with Christmas cards or packages, including Sam Fox, center; Billy Vermillion, forward and quarterback, and Felix Silverstein, Bernie Applebaum and Charlie Clark.

The Postoffice has left Central's gymnasium virtually bereft of first-string basketballers and Coach Jack Ray has discontinued practice. Some of the Central boys, though, work at night—72 cents 'n hour.

E. B. Brassy, who is in charge of the distribution division, where the sporting world is best represented, says he has noticed that the college athletes are not any better than the high school boys. Observers say the college stars make just as many fumbles as Fox, Silverstein, Applebaum et al.

The boys don't take the work terrible hard. There is plenty of signal drill but no scrimmage. "It's a little tough on the eyes," Tehaan said, as he tucked away a letter in a slot for Hagerstown, or was it Hyattsville?

Deficit Drops Half a Billion From Year Ago

Federal Expenses Hold Up, But Receipts Are Larger.

New York, Dec. 22.—While Federal expenditures in November were larger than a year ago, this increase was more than offset by lower expenditures in previous months of the current fiscal year, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Consequently, total expenditures for the first five months of the fiscal year, which began with July, were slightly smaller than in the corresponding period last year.

Receipts, on the other hand, were substantially larger than a year ago, helped materially by a sharp increase in the amount of loans repaid to the Government.

As a result, the deficit during the first five months amounted to $1,245,000,000 this year compared with $1,693,000,000 last year, a decrease of $448,000,000. This has naturally tended to slow down the rate of the current inflationary movement.

Practically the entire deficit this year has been met with funds from the Treasury. The debt during the first five months showed an increase of less than $16,000,000. During the corresponding period last year the debt was increased by $933,000,000.

Lincoln Service Corp. Votes Extra and Bonus

Directors of the Lincoln Service Corporation, industrial bankers, declared yesterday a two months' dividend on the 7 per cent preferred stock instead of the usual quarterly dividend in order to establish dividend payment dates to run concurrently with the calendar year.

The directors also declared at this meeting an extra dividend distribution of 25 cents per share on the common stock. Both dividends are payable December 28 to stockholders of record November 30. The directors also authorized the payment of bonuses and granted salary increases to the employes of the corporation and its subsidiaries located in the States of Maryland, Virginia and Pennsylvania.

Financial Markets Closing for Holidays

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Financial and commodity markets throughout the world will close Christmas Day, and most of them will extend the holiday-making through the following day, Saturday, December 26, a survey today showed.

The principal exception to the Saturday-closing rule will be American grain markets, which, led by the Chicago Board of Trade, will do the usual abbreviated Saturday business. Cash grains will not be traded in New York however, and the markets at Winnipeg and Liverpool will remain closed.

Secretary of the Treasury Monganthau announces that the tenders for two series of Treasury bills, to be dated December 23, 1936, which were offered on December 18, have been opened at the Federal Reserve banks.

Tenders were invited for the two series to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts, and $208,242,000 was applied for, of which $100,082,000 was accepted.

Cigarettes Set Another Record In November

Output for Year Expected to Reach Total of 150 Billion.

Further records for cigarette production in the United States were established in November and for the first 11 months of 1936, marking the sixth consecutive month to reach a new high level for the month, and the sixteenth of the last 17 months to go into new high ground for that month.

The November increase of 755,857,400 cigarettes over November, 1935, was about in line with expectations, and confirms the belief that the output for the full year will be not less than 150,000,000,000 cigarettes. The 11 months total reached 139,920,810,050 cigarettes, a gain of over 15,000,000,000 from the total for the corresponding period of 1935.

Cigar production in November showed the seasonal falling off from October, but continued to run ahead of last year, and the higher priced cigars made a better showing than a year ago. Class A cigars, or those selling for 5 cents each or less, accounted for only 82.2 per cent of the total in November, against 83.2 per cent of the total in November last year, and 81.2 per cent in November, 1934. Production of the highest priced cigars, those selling for 25 cents each or more, reached the highest point since November, 1931, while the class D cigars, the next highest priced class, made the best showing since November, 1932.

Total cigar production for 1936 is certain to exceed the five billion mark, the first time since 1931 that this has occurred. December output is always the lowest of the year, with the peak reached in October.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Improve in Moderate Trading; U. S. Bonds Droop; Wheat Is Lower.

New York, Dec. 22.—Grain prices suffered from profit taking, possibly occasioned by the estimate of a record-breaking acreage for next year, and Government bonds softened, but stocks rallied. The improvement in stock prices appeared to be rather a mechanical affair and sales volume again fell short of 2,000,000 shares. Most stock leaders were a point or so higher toward the close. May wheat lost 2⅞ cents at 121¼ cents a bushel.

While the securities markets milled around purposelessly, the Government took the first step along its newly laid course of greater credit control against possible future inflation. Having determined further to reduce excess bank reserves, after the turn of the year, by an increase in reserve requirements, it was logical to do something to stop the upbuilding of reserves through gold imports. Last August when the Federal Reserve Board first lifted reserve requirements and cut down excess reserves by nearly one and a half billions, nothing was done to prevent the rebuilding of the excess. Consequently as gold continued to pour in, the reserves mounted.

British Method.

Today the Treasury announced that henceforth it would change the method of accounting for gold imports. Instead of taking the gold from the banks and depositing gold certificates with the Federal Reserve banks, which thereby became a potential expander of credit to the extent of about ten times, the Treasury now will take the gold and pay for it by borrowing money from the banks on discount bills, thus taking out of the money market as much funds as it puts in. The gold then will be held in a special account. The effect of this will be that, inasmuch as the banks buy the discount bills, they will have on balance no more credit reserves than before.

Later if gold goes out, the Treasury will sell it and use the funds to retire discount bills, so that the market will not lose funds as the gold leaves, any more than from now on it will gain funds as the gold comes in. That is approximately the system followed from the start by the British stabilization fund, and it has worked well, for the London money market has remained calm, and certainly strongly under the influence of the authorities.

Debt Will Rise.

The necessity for this method of "sterilizing" gold is now immediately apparent, as the excess credit reserves built up under the old way were not put to use. Demand for credit has not been sufficient to take up the surplus. Rather the new scheme is devised as a means of preventing an inflation expected in future from getting out of control. Some of the gold that has come here has been frightened capital; some of it has come directly because the government undervalued the dollar. Sterilizing the gold probably will have no effect on further imports or exports of gold.

One objection may be raised to the Treasury's latest step, but it is unlikely to be given much attention, inasmuch as no great concern seems to have been felt over the enormous piling up of Federal debt. The increase in Federal indebtedness will rise in proportion to gold imports. This year we have brought in more than a billion in gold. The same rate if maintained next year would add just that much to the Government debt, on which interest (or its equivalent) must be paid, while the evidence of the debt—the gold—remains just so much dead weight storage in the Kentucky caverns. However, most observers do not look for much further gold inflow.

Government Bonds Soften.

Nothing in the new gold policy threatens the stability of the stock market, and if it is designed to curb a runaway affair later, that is a bullish development from a long term standpoint. The case was a bit different with Government bonds. Their price is based largely on interest rates, and with gold eliminated as a factor bearing down on rates, the expected lifting of the reserve requirements at the banks will tend, if not actually to harden money, at least to mark more conclusively the end of the period of declining rates. After their brief recovery yesterday, Government bonds resumed today their declining tendency. Dollars weakened a little against sterling, francs and guilders.

Banking Position.

An increase of $119,000,000 in commercial and miscellaneous loans, which had been foreshadowed by a rise of $70,000,000 in such advances in the New York district in the figures for reporting New York banks last Thursday, was the outstanding feature of the statement of member banks in 101 leading cities in the week ended December 16. The increase was largely to commercial customers, but was believed to include not only some finance company paper but some borrowing to purchase new Government securities and some loans to companies which were using a large percentage of their cash to pay dividends to avoid the tax upon undistributed income. Banks also added to their holdings of their own acceptances. Loans on securities to others than banks and brokers were up $26,000,000 most of the increases being in New York. Acceptances and commercial paper purchased rose $11,000,000.

Bank Investment.

Nearly 60 per cent of the new Government bonds sold for cash last week were paid for in cash, the difference being paid for by deposit credit, which was about in line with early estimates. It did show a strong tendency back to book credits for previous new offerings had been subscribed to in cash to an amount equal to 75 or 80 per cent of the total. With higher reserves around the corner naturally banks were a little careful about depleting their cash too greatly just before announcement of an increase in reserve needs. The member banks, as of December 16, revealed a net addition of only $118,000,000 to their Government securities in the face of an increase of $250,000,000 in their Government deposits. That might look as though the banks subscribed to Government securities by book credit and immediately sold the securities received. Actually they subscribed for customers as well as for themselves by book credit, but delivered the customers securities while retaining large amounts for their own account, which is why the Government deposits were almost double the net addition to Government securities portfolios.

Sale of Gold Near?

It is possible that, with the Dutch stabilization fund piling up dollars here at a great rate, the dollars will soon be converted into gold. Yesterday and today sellers known to act for official account supplied guilders to all and sundry, yet the demand for guilders appeared insatiable. There is a strong net repatriation of capital to Holland and it is probable that demands for exchange in connection with payment for Dutch commidities, such as rubber, may be intensifying the flow of money to the Netherlands. The Dutch have adhered to the tripartite currency agreement and can have all the gold they need from the Treasury whenever they wish it.

Domestic Copper At Six-Year Peak

New York, Dec. 22 (AP).—Principal producers today raised the price of copper for domestic use to 11⅝ cents a pound from 11 cents. The new quotation is the highest since June, 1930. Today's advance came as the climax of a broad upward surge in non-ferrous metal prices throughout the fall, which has brought to six and seven year highs the quotations of zinc, lead, and copper for export. Copper for shipment abroad got another boost today, rising to 11.60 cents a pound, laid down in European base ports, a top since July, 1930, when 11.80 cents was reached.

Big Planting Of New Wheat Reduces Prices

July Contracts Decline Most With Drop of 3½ Cents.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Staggering from effects of official announcement of unprecedented huge planting of wheat, prices of bread material suffered a nearly vertical fall today of 3⅜ to 3½ cent.

July wheat, which represents the new 1937 domestic crop, was under the greatest selling pressure, and plunged down 3⅜ cents, with December rye off 3½ cents. Wheat buying on price tumbles, however, readily absorbed offerings, and just before business was ended something of a rally took place.

At the close, wheat was 2⅛ to 3⅛ cents under yesterday's finish. December, 135¼@135⅜; May 129⅞@130; July, 114¼@114⅜; corn ¾ to 1¼ off, December, 108⅛@108¼; May, new, 104⅛@104¼; July, new, 100¾@100⅞; oats 1⅛ to 1½ down, May 49⅝@49¾, and rye showing 3⅛ to 3½ loss, May 109. Provisions results were 12 to 22 cents lower.

6 More Firms In District Give Holiday Bonus

Leary & Bros. to Pay Extra $5,000; Other Companies Reward Workers.

Six more Washington firms yesterday joined the Christmas bonus parade, announcing extra holiday compensation for their employes.

They are H. B. Leary, jr., & Bros., automobile distributors; Liggett Drug Stores, the Washington office of Eastern Airlines, the Miller-Dudley Co., automotive and commercial electricians; the Elite Laundry Co., and the District Wholesale Corporation.

Bonuses totaling more than $5,000 were distributed by the Leary firm, with offices at 1612 U street northwest, to its 79 employes, on a basis of length of service.

Employes of the drug firm earning $25 a week or less will receive a week's pay, while those earning more than $25, will receive a flat $25 bonus. This applies to those who have been with the firm since January 2, 1936.

Approximately 60 employes of the airlines office here will receive bonuses, based on length of service and amount of pay, ranging from $35 to $50. Flying personnel, because of a recent increase in pay, will not participate.

At the Miller-Dudley Co., all employes will receive a week's pay and additional bonuses will be given those with a long record of service.

Elite Laundry will pay bonuses to all employes, some payments ranging as high as $150 for veterans. Four hundred workers will participate.

Close to $1,500 in bonuses will be distributed to employes of the District Wholesale Corporation, liquor dealers, with headquarters at 507 K street northwest.

Jones' Suggests New Procedure In Crop Control

Changes in Administration of Act Urged by Head of House Group.

Improved administration of the soil conservation act was called for yesterday by Chairman Marvin Jones, of the House Agricultural Committee, who proposed simplified procedure and speeding up of payments.

Jones said changes, improving and simplifying the farm program, can be brought about without new legislation.

"In the first place," he said, "it should be announced earlier and proof of compliance should be simplified and hastened in order that payments may be made promptly * * *

Second, instead of having three classifications, including soil depleting, soil conserving and soil building crops and practices, the entire field should be covered simply into two classifications—soil depleting crops and practices and soil building crops and practices."

As a third means of improvement, Jones recommended that instead of benefit payments being measured by the basic production of individual crops, each farm should be treated as one unit and the allowance for soil building crops and practices measured by the basic tilled acreage.

"This would insure fair treatment to the man who has heretofore adjusted and diversified his production," Jones said. "At the same time a producer could be given his soil building payments only on condition that he made the proper plantings and engaged in the proper soil building practices."

Sex Hormone's Synthesis Held Chemical Feat

Society Lists Outstanding Industry Achievements; Acclaims U. S. Work.

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 22.—The American Chemical Society has listed a synthesis of a female hormone among leading contributions of the Nation's chemical industry in 1936.

The society in its annual report asserted the United States industry led all others, both in number of inventions and the quantity of material produced.

The review said "huge tonnages of synthetic products used in this country are daily increasing and their variety is widening at a rate far greater than can be equaled in any other country of the world."

Theelin, one of the two sex hormones responsible for female characteristics, was listed as an important development because of its future use in the control of sex irregularities. It was made synthetically from ergosterol by Russell E. Marker and Thomas S. Oakwood at the Pennsylvania State College, and is the third sex hormone to be made artificially.

Spectra Motion Pictures.

The society picked the following as among the major scientific developments of 1936, in the field of chemistry, which it said other nations were unable to match:

Motion pictures of spectra—increases sensitivity and accuracy of the spectroscope in detecting traces of elements.

Polarizing plates—One depends on formation of tiny crystals in an elastic medium; the other on formation of a single large thin crystal on a glass surface.

Modern alchemy—New transmutations accomplished by bombarding nuclei of atoms with neutrons, protons and deutrons in electric fields ranging up to 17,000,000 volts. Beryllium atoms were formed from lithium atoms, gold from platinum and magnesium from sodium.

Tubercle bacilli—Discovered that the germs produce disease in the human body by means of three chemicals—a sugar, a protein and an acid, all toxic.

Mosaic Disease in Tobacco.

Virus diseases—Studies of the Mosaic disease in tobacco plants indicated that the virus of a disease may not be living material, but a protein.

Carbon Monoxide poisoning—Found to kill in far smaller concentrations than had hitherto been considered dangerous.

Protomaine insulin—Used in improved treatment of diabetes, which increases the effectiveness of ordinary insulin eight times.

Dental anesthetic—Made of sulfuric ether, ethyl alcohol and thymol, desensitizes dentine of teeth to dental drilling.

New fingerprinting method—Utilizes iodine vapor blown across substances to bring out latent image.

Cashier's Slayer Granted Reprieve

Thomas Jordan, 30-year-old bus-boy slayer of Mrs. Lizzie Jaynes, former cashier of the Garden-T Shoppe on Columbia road, was given a reprieve from electrocution January 8 in District Court yesterday when Justice Peyton Gordon postponed the date of execution until February 19.

The postponement was granted after Harry T. Whalen and William B. O'Connell, attorneys for the pallid-faced convicted slayer, notified Justice Gordon they wished to present to the Department of Justice a plea for executive clemency on the theory that at best Jordan should have been convicted of second-degree murder, whereas he was found guilty of first-degree murder.

Jordan was convicted of having fatally shot Mrs. Jaynes in a hold-up of the Garden-T-Shoppe several years ago. He contested the validity of his conviction by questioning the right of Government employes to serve on Criminal Court juries, but the United States Supreme Court ruled recently that such jurors were qualified to serve.
